Hydro lops plans, 300 jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro has cut almost $100 million from its planned capital expenditures for next year, and has laid off 300 temporary employees, chairman Robert Bonner said Monday, in a letter to employees and in an interview.

Bonner said the company was faced with a loss of $35 million and was attempting to fight mounting costs and financial losses with the move. He also said consideration of increased rates for electric, gas and transit service will begin soon.

He said the $35-million deficit was expected by the end of the current fiscal year ending March 31, and "if costs are not brought under control, and if revenues are not increased, we are facing a doubled deficit by the end of the next fiscal year at March 31, 1977."

The letter to Hydro employees said: "Our first priority, therefore, must be to reduce operating and capital costs substantially without reducing the reliability and quality of service to our customers. To do so, we are examining all capital projects in detail to determine the feasibility of deferring projects and, at the same time, we are studying all opportunities to reduce operating costs by modifying or cancelling functions which are discretionary."

Bonner said cost control was the first problem to be solved because "there is a limit . . . to what the public should be asked to bear" in restoring Hydro's financial health.

He said it is possible the company will lose money on its gas and electrical operations. Previously, it had been expected that the loss would result only from the expanded transit services in Vancouver and Victoria.

The Hydro chairman said the cutback in capital expenditures will not endanger the construction of generating capacity or service to customers, but would delay the start of some projects or increase the term of some construction.

Lockheed Orions

Plane deal delayed by scandal

OTTAWA (CP) — The Lockheed scandal apparently has delayed indefinitely the signing of a $950 million military contract under which Canada would buy 18 Lockheed Orions as long-range patrol aircraft.

Defence Minister James Richardson, after a 90-minute meeting Monday with Lockheed chairman Robert Haack, said collapse of negotiations is possible unless Lockheed is able to overcome serious problems resulting from the scandal.

Richardson called the meeting after Daniel Stoughton resigned last Friday as Lockheed chairman. He had testified before a U.S. congressional committee that Lockheed had bribed foreign officials to gain contracts. The testimony appears to have scuttled a $1.2 billion Lockheed sale to Japan.

Richardson told a news conference after the meeting he had been assured by Haack a new financing arrangement could be expected later this year.

"The difficulty has not been resolved," he said as both men refused to speculate on when the contract might be signed.

Haack said the effect of the Japanese order on Lockheed and on the Canadian sale has been exaggerated.

About $200 million worth of subcontracts to Canadair Ltd., Montreal, to build Orion parts would not be affected by a Japanese decision not to sign a contract, he said.

W. R. Wilson, Lockheed's senior vice president, said the impact of the Japanese sale on Lockheed has been "vastly overstated." Canadian officials later agreed, saying the Japanese contract called for aircraft to be built in Japan.

Also with Haack were Roy Anderson, Lockheed's new vice-chairman and chief financial officer, and Fred Leary, executive vice-president of the Bankers Trust of New York, a consortium of 24 banks.

Pittance, pain price of navy injury

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

A 38-year-old Victoria man who was injured twice while in the navy and subsequently discharged on medical grounds, has been fighting a losing battle with military bureaucracy for five years in his efforts to get a disability pension.

Dennis Turgeon of 561 Mount View Avenue says he gave 17 years of his life to the Royal Canadian Navy and in return was kicked out because he was no longer of use to the military.

Although he will never be able to hold a job as a result of two head injuries he received while in the navy, the veterans affairs department pays him only $20 a month, based on a 5-per-cent disability assessment.

At 38, Turgeon can never work again; he can never have sexual intercourse again.

"I ruined my life in the navy. I'm finished and all they want to give me is $20 a month," he said in an interview.

Turgeon has great difficulty talking. His statements come slowly and falteringly.

He takes more than 2,000 painkilling pills a year to control the pains which are the result of his two head injuries.

Turgeon's story sounds like a bureaucratic nightmare.

Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon says the DVA's position on the case is a "mass of contradictions."

Turgeon's story begins May 28, 1965, when he was a leading seaman.

During a drill aboard the destroyer-escort HMCS Qu'Appelle in Esquimalt Har-

Reporters nabbed in Lagos

LONDON (Reuter) — The Reuter news agency office in Lagos was closed Monday by police who took the three Reuter correspondents in Nigeria away for questioning.

A message received before the Reuter circuit to London was disconnected, said chief correspondent Colin Fox, who is British, and his Nigerian assistants, Godwin Ironkwe and Gabriel Ogunsekan, had been taken away in a police car.

No reason has been given for the action against the Reuter staff, who reported Friday's abortive coup attempt in Nigeria.

Air Canada 'hot seat' for public-affairs man

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Taylor, a long-time Air Canada official, has been named president and chief executive officer of the publicly-owned airline, Transport Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

He will replace Ralph Vaughan who has resigned to become a senior Air Canada vice-president and policy adviser And, as chief executive officer, Taylor takes over from Yves Pratte who resigned in bitterness as airline chairman in November.

The appointment was announced after an Air Canada board of directors meeting attended by Lang here.

Taylor, 50, has been Air Canada vice-president of public affairs since October, 1973.

The transport minister did not appoint a new chairman although it is understood the job was offered to prominent Montreal businessman Pierre Des Marais who turned it down. With the chief executive officer's duties transferred to the president, the chairman's job has lost much of its power.

Taylor
. . . 'challenge'

Des Marais is an Air Canada director and a leading municipal political leader in the Montreal area.

Pierre Taschereau, Canadian National Railways chairman, has been acting chairman since Pratte's resignation.

Taylor said he will aim at making a profit this year after a 1975 Air Canada deficit of $12.5 million. The deficit in 1974 was $9.2 million.

"We have been through very difficult periods in the last few months," he said.

"My challenge is to try and

Plea bargaining attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada says attorneys-general and judges should act to stop plea bargaining, which the commission defines as any agreement by the accused to plead guilty in return for some benefit.

The commission, in a working paper on control of the process of criminal procedure, says plea bargaining could be ended at once if attorneys-general directed prosecutors to discontinue the practice. It recommended this.

Plea bargaining explains why, for instance, many murder charges end as manslaughter convictions. The charge of murder is placed to scare the accused into pleading guilty to manslaughter, saving time and money.

The prosecution, to induce a guilty plea, also can offer to reduce the number of charges, proceed by summary rather than the more serious indictment procedure, and recommend a light sentence.

The commission condemns this.

Plea bargaining takes place in private. This means that the judge and the public never really hear the case.

"A dangerous criminal should not be let off with a minor conviction and penalty just because he is willing to plead guilty, and thus save the state the time and expense of a trial," the commission said. "Nor does society benefit from a negotiated plea of guilty by a petty offender who should not have been prosecuted."

It also recommended changes that would make attorneys-general more politically accountable for the administration of justice. Among them:

● Attorneys-general should issue directives to prosecutors establishing policy on discretion in placing charges. The policy guides should be made public.

● Consent of the attorney-general to prosecute charges should be required to ensure uniformity of law enforcement across Canada. "As applied to the offence of public

Art Lee retains Vancouver seat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two B.C. Supreme Court judges Monday upheld the 1974 federal election of Liberal MP Art Lee in Vancouver East.

Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz and Justice Davie Fulton dismissed a petition from Paddy Neale, former New Democratic Party MP, to have the election voided because of irregularities. Final results had given Lee a 57-vote margin.

The judges found that all but one of the five instances of irregular procedure cited by Neale's counsel either were without merit or could not have significantly affected the outcome of the vote.

They did not consider evidence regarding 378 voters alleged to have voted in the advance poll without having sworn the required affidavit, or having sworn defective affidavits.

Neale said his "personal inclination" is to accept the judgment as final. He said he would have to consult with his lawyer but likely will not appeal.

Neale said he has made no final decision on whether he will re-enter politics.

Lee was not available for comment.

25-year stay overruled

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A decision by a Burnaby provincial court judge to adjourn a case for 25 years was overruled Monday.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Kirke Smith ruled against Judge D. D. Hart after the crown appealed the provincial court decision.

Hart, a former juvenile and family court judge, gave the 25-year remand, to December, 1999, to Paul Murray Tayes, 17, of Burnaby, when the youth appeared before him two months ago on a charge of driving with a blood alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

Sean Madigan, district crown prosecutor, said Hart's order erred in law by adjourning the proceedings for more than eight days without the consent of the prosecution.

No immediate leaps in prices as freeze lifted

There were no visible price leaps Monday, the first day after the provincial freeze was lifted.

The freeze, placed on wholesale and retail foodstuffs, prescription drugs, proprietary and patent medicines, energy fuels and certain provincial freight rates, was enacted Oct. 24 by the former New Democratic Party government and later extended.

Rises in the prices of coffee, fish, soup, paper products and heating oil are expected to be among the first but the public will not be hit immediately with the full increases.

Heating oil is expected to rise 4.5 cents to 43.5 cents a gallon.

Some B.C. consumers thought liquor prices were going to be the first to go up and many stocked up on Saturday. But Al Zubick, assistant stock director for the Liquor Administration Branch in Vancouver, said Monday there were no increases authorized at present.

Spokesman Ken Murdoch said the provincial consumer services department will continue to monitor increases in prices but warned that prices will be permitted to go up within the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

A check Monday with the consumer services department in Victoria for a reaction to removal of the freeze brought a laugh from information director Dorothy Atwater, who said the only reaction was "from the media."

The department receives print-outs of wholesale food prices and will use these as a base for monitoring prices in local stores.

Consumers with complaints about price increases are being directed to the Revenue Canada anti-inflation board hotline at 388-2711.

Some items, caught at special or sale prices when the freeze was ordered, are expected to take a sharp rise.

A spokesman for Canada Safeway Ltd. said shoppers will not be hit by immediate shopping increases.

A spokesman for B.C. Hydro in Vancouver confirmed an earlier announcement that increases are being considered for bus fares, natural gas and electricity rates.

Frank Archer, executive secretary of the Professional Pharmacists Society in Vancouver, said drug prices will definitely increase.

"It will take some time," he said. "The prices go from the company to the wholesaler to the pharmacist, who has started using the stock."

Archer said several unionized stores granted an 8 per cent increase to employees Jan. 1 and will probably have to increase dispensing fees to cover the costs.

nudity, for instance, the rule acts as a check on over-zealous or puritanical prosecutors."

● The annorney-general or his deputy should be required to approve all applications for preventive detention, whih the coommission says should be abolished. Preventive detention means some offenders can be jailed indefinitely.

● The right of appeal should continue to be subject to the consent of the attorney-general or his deputy. The same would apply to stays of proceedings, which leave an accused person accused but not tried.

The commission suggests that judges should be empowered to require the consent of an attorney-general for the continuation of a prosecution. This would happen where the prosecution has acted legally, but unfairly in delaying the case, or where police entrapment is evident.

It also says prosecutors must be briefed fully by police before a case goes to court.

"Where charging decisions are left to the police, it may be difficult for the prosecuting lawyer to exercise properly his responsibilities for the conduct of the case, especially if, as frequently occurs, he is not briefed on the case before the first court appearance.

"If charges have been laid on insufficient evidence, the wrong charge is laid, the form of the charge is defective, or for any other reason the police have made an incorrect charging decision, the prosecutor will have no opportunity to correct the mistake until court appearance, either in the pre-trial or trial stages."

Major gunbattle outside Belfast

BELFAST (AP) — British troops fought a gun battle with terrorists on a mountain overlooking Belfast on Monday as security forces combed the Northern Ireland capital for gunmen who slaughtered three women in a suburban house.

British army headquarters reported that at least a dozen gunmen, believed to be Irish Republican Army guerrillas, shot it out with troops on Divis Mountain. The firefight was the heaviest to break out in Northern Ireland in months.

The military claimed two of the gunmen were hit in the two-hour exchange. No army casualties were reported.

A military spokesman said the shooting started early Monday when gunmen opened up on two army posts guarding television transmitters on the mountain in what appeared to be an IRA trap.

Army reinforcements were called in by radio. But they were ambushed by a third group of gunmen as they drove up the mountain in darkness.

The reinforcements, caught in a crossfire, took cover in one of the fortified army posts, the spokesman said.

The gunmen melted away in pre-dawn mists. At first light, some 300 troops swept across the mountain in a dragnet. But the military said no trace of the gunmen was found.

Impeach-Isabel bid fails

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — The government ended an emergency session of congress Monday in an apparent move to stave off a possible impeachment motion against President Isabel Peron.

Opposition congressmen were expected this week to discuss the possibility of impeaching Mrs. Peron or of calling a joint session of congress to declare her incompetent.

By calling an end to the emergency session, the government also halted the activities of a congressional committee looking into alleged administrative corruption.

Meanwhile, businessmen closed stores and restaurants across Argentina Monday in a 24-hour protest against Mrs. Peron's economic policy.

Pittance, pain

bor, he received a head injury when he suddenly got up from a crouching position and hit his head against a metal object.

The mishap punctured his skull and left a hole about the size of a quarter.

Turgeon reported the accident immediately but was not x-rayed until three months later when he began to suffer severe headaches.

In 1969, Turgeon was aboard the destroyer-escort HMCS St. Croix en route to New Zealand when he collided with a metal mail box bolted onto the wall in one of the ship's gangways.

He had stepped aside to let another sailor pass when the accident occurred.

He still doesn't remember anything of the event. He was kept at a New Zealand hospital for a few days and then returned to Canada.

Again no x-rays were taken until two weeks after the accident occurred.

In July 1971, Turgeon was summonsed to the discharge quarters and told he would be discharged on medical grounds.

"They gave me two days notice. Just kicked me out," he said.

The navy doctors gave Turgeon a 100-per-cent disability, but that didn't count with the Canadian Pension Commission, dealing with pension claims for the DVA.

That commission concluded that Turgeon had a 5-per-cent disability.

The Canada Pension Plan, however, another federal government agency, granted him 100 per cent disability, but again, that doesn't appear to influence the Canadian Pension Commission.

He has a mountain of correspondence from which one fact emerges clearly: The Canadian Pension Commission bases its assessment on the assumption that Turgeon might have developed migraine headaches at some later stage in his life, regardless of the two head injuries he received.

This assessment is contrary to a number of reports from doctors and psychiatrists which clearly attribute the main cause of Turgeon's disability to the accidents.

The Canadian Pension Commission has in a written document assumed "full responsibility" for the two accidents, but won't go beyond its 5-per-cent disability assessment.

And how does Turgeon's disability manifest itself?

"I can't bend down. My heart will start beating and blood will rush to my head. The headaches are so bad, I have to take up to nine pills (292s) to control the pain," he said.

The slightest exertion will make him faint. He can't hold a job.

I can't even have any sex," he said.

"When I'm not careful the way I move around, I start vomiting," he added.

Turgeon remembers the way it used to be.

"I was a diver; as a matter of fact, I was in the first navy diving class ever. I was pilot. I loved playing badminton — all shot to hell, all over," he said.

And what he is offered is $20 a month. He doesn't cash the cheques. He fights the government to get a decent pension.

At full disability, the government would have to pay him $370 a month.

As things are now, he and his wife have to do on $170 a month from the Canada Pension plus $226 which he gets every month from his superannuation.

"It's slim pickin's, but what can you do?" he said.

To get justice, he plans an assault on the government by mail and through the news media.

"I'm at the end of the rope. I don't know what to do any more," he said.

He said he will send letters to all MPs to try to enlist their support for his fight.

"I can't do worse than I have until now," he said.

At least one MP is on his side. McKinnon said he had just written to Daniel MacDonald, minister of the Veterans affairs department, for the third time.

"I'll keep writing until I get a satisfactory answer from him," McKinnon said.

ment which has negotiating authority in the deal, Haack said he hoped the matter could be resolved "in the fairly near future."

Lockheed had hoped to have the contract signed in mid-January but questions had been raised about the company's integrity and financial viability, Haack said in an interview.

"This is my first call as chairman to hopefully assure Canadian representatives that Lockheed is a financially viable company, that we have no cash problems, and that we are in the process of refinancing to increase the equity of the company," he said.

Haack said Lockheed made $50 million last year in profit. The company's problem was due to the depressed state of commercial aviation and a resulting decline in orders for jetliners.

Haack said he assured Richardson that "at no time or in any circumstances" had Lockheed bribed anyone in Canada in connection with either the Orion sale or an earlier sale of L-1011 Tri Stars to Air Canada. Richardson said he believed Haack and there was no evidence of bribery or payoffs.

In the Commons, Richardson told Allan McKinnon (PC-Victoria) that there has been "no reversal in our position." Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer was responsible for furthe negotiations.

"These negotiations have been made more difficult as a result of the difficulties Lockheed has experienced in recent weeks."

McKinnon had asked whether the real problem was not short-term financing and Canada's reluctance to put up money.

give the 20,000 employees of the airline a feeling they have a role to play and a contribution to make."

Lang said he does not expect announcement of a permanent chairman for some time. But he said work is proceeding on changes to Air Canada legislation that would give the airline broader powers to enter other kinds of business. He has said before Air Canada might be permitted to get into such businesses as the travel agency trade.

Born in Salisbury, N.B., Taylor attended McGill University and is a registered industrial accountant.

He joined Air Canada in Moncton, N.B., in 1949 and was transferred to Montreal in 1950 where he has remained since, principally in sales and marketing jobs.

He was named general manager of marketing in 1965, vice-president of strategic development in 1970, vice-president of government and industry affairs in 1971 and then vice-president of public affairs.

Taylor became chairman of the Air Transport Association of Canada at the airline industry association's annual meeting in November last year. He is married and has two children.

Air Canada officials close to Taylor say he is an effective manager, readily delegating responsibilities to people he trusts. Critics inside the airline said last summer that Pratte tried to do too much himself, so that many subordinates were afraid to make decisions.

One Air Canada official said recently that Taylor recognizes that he does not know much about the technical side of the airline business such as engineering and maintenance details and relies on people knowledgeable about these things for guidance.

Blood 'print' tells a lot

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A technique to determine a person's sex, race and drug habits from a dried bloodstain the size of a quarter has been developed by Dr. Robert Shaler, University of Pittsburgh professor of forensic chemistry.

Law enforcement officials believe the project could be a significant breakthrough in criminal identification.

Two more years of research will be needed to complete the project.

National immigration survey

'Open door' opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — French-Canadians are less favorably disposed to bother ethnic groups and to immigration than any other major group in the country, say results of a national survey conducted for the secretary of state department.

The survey, presented to the Canadian Conference of Multiculturalism during the weekend, found French-Canadians more authoritarian and "ethnocentric," whether living in Quebec or elsewhere in the country.

At the same time, English-speaking Canadians in the Atlantic provinces were reported to be more favorable toward authority than English-speakers elsewhere in Canada. They were also said to be less favorably inclined to other ethnic groups.

In general, Canadians of English-speaking origin were found to share basically the same attitudes toward immigration and cultural diversity as English-speaking Canadians of other ethnic backgrounds.

The study found a general acceptance of immigration in all parts of the country but a marked preference for immigrants with higher education and skilled trades. However, there was greater antipathy toward immigrants with a high economic status already in Canada and less toward those low in the economic scale.

Reaction was mostly negative to immigration from Communist countries and to an unselective and open immigration policy generally.

Both English-speaking and French-speaking groups regarded each other highly in comparison to other ethnic groups. Both rated northern European groups higher than eastern or southern European immigrants. Europeans in general rated higher than immigrants from other parts of the world.

"Those of Russian and Ukrainian descent were somewhat less positive in their perception of immigration consequences, most concerned about unemployment and found immigrants of all kinds less acceptable than members of other non-English, non-French descent groups," the study found.

Canadians of higher economic status were more tolerant of other ethnic groups and more favorable to immigration in general.

Moroccan outpost falls

RABAT (UPI) — Morocco said Monday Algeria overran a Moroccan outpost in the former Spanish Sahara Saturday, killing 100 Moroccan troops and taking 200 others prisoner.

In the first details on the desert battle near Amgala, 125 miles from the Algerian border, the information ministry said that when reinforcements arrived they found 100 dead Moroccan soldiers. The rest of the garrison had disappeared into the desert "with the foreign invaders."

Signalling a major escalation in the conflict over the former Spanish colony, the ministry spokesman said, "The use of Soviet-built Migs and tanks convinced us that Algerian forces were behind the traitorous act."

A "furious and bloody" battle raged from Saturday evening until midday Sunday when the Algerian forces retreated before Moroccan reinforcements, the spokesman said.

The reinforcements did not encounter the Algerian force and Amgala was again under Moroccan control, the spokesman said.

Embassy denies ambassador ill

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States embassy termed "inaccurate and misleading" on Monday a published report that U.S. Ambassador Walter Stoessel has a mysterious blood ailment possibly caused or aggravated by high-level microwaves beamed at the embassy by Soviet agents.

It said Stoessel has gone cross-country skiing and played paddle tennis in recent days.

The Boston Globe had quoted sources as saying Stoessel's alleged ailment resembles leukemia and was a major factor leading to an American protest to the Kremlin over microwave transmissions.

A U.S. embassy spokesman here, asked to comment on The Globe story, said:

"We have seen various stories about the ambassador's health, all of which are inaccurate and misleading. It would not be appropriate to comment specifically on the ambassador's health or on that of any other individual.

"However, the ambassador feels fine, keeps a busy schedule, leads an active life, has not undergone medical treatment and is not at the present time undergoing medical treatment."

Earlier news accounts out of Moscow said Western residents assume the Soviets are directing a microwave bugging device toward a section of the embassy's three top floors where classified work is conducted.

A U.S. state department medical technician is in Moscow, apparently to check blood samples of embassy staffers to determine whether the radiation level has created hazards.

But no one in authority would say whether any illness related to the radiation has been discovered.

Shot by commander

Mercenary tells how five died

ATHENS (Reuter) — A Greek mercenary in the Angola civil war was quoted here Monday as saying that five British mercenaries were shot to death by their commander, known as Col. Callan, because they killed 10 other foreign mercenaries.

Tassos Petropoulos, a former non-commissioned officer in the Greek army, was quoted by the Athens newspaper Ta Nea as saying that Callan, the name used by Cypriot-born Costas Georgiou, is still alive.

British mercenaries returning from Angola last week said Callan, who once served in a British parachute regiment, had ordered the killing of 14 British soldiers of fortune for refusing to fight.

Petropoulos—a pseudonym — was quoted as saying that Callan shot the five Britons because they killed 10 Dutch, French and Italian mercenaries in the jungle.

Petropoulos was quoted as saying that Callan had received information that many mercenaries from London had orders to sabotage operations carried out by his side.

Secret deal alleged with Soviet Union

LONDON (CP) — The self-styled chief of a British private army says he has cancelled plans to send 500 men—including nine Canadians—to fight in the Angolan civil war.

Paul Daniels said today the offer of troops has been withdrawn because Western governments have secretly agreed with the Soviet Union not to intervene in any future Soviet-backed war against South Africa or Rhodesia.

On the contrary, however, Britain and other Western governments have publicly called for a commitment to non-intervention by Cuba, which has troops in Angola.

Daniels is head of a group called British Military Volunteer Forces, which he describes as an anti-Communist private army.

He said last week that 500 former soldiers, including nine former members of the Canadian army, had signed up to fight in Angola for about $300 a week.

But the alleged collusion between Western governments and the Soviet Union meant "we cannot fight treachery and treason on such dimensions."

He said he received the information about a Western agreement with the Soviet Union from "top-level sources" in Angola and Mozambique.

Jews want out

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — The Soviet Union has indicated that 750,000 of the country's three million Jews want to emigrate, an organizer of an international conference on Soviet Jewry opening here Tuesday said today.

Stanley Lowell of the United States said that in the five years since the first conference was held in the Belgian capital, 115,000 Jews have left for Israel.

"The Soviet Union said then that no Jews wanted to leave. The facts speak for themselves," he told a news conference.

"Our best guess now is that three-quarters of a million want to leave. This is the opinion we got in discussion with many people, including the Soviet Union itself in its calmer moments," said Lowell, chairman of the U.S. Conference on Soviet Jewry.

More than 1,200 delegates from 32 countries will attend the three-day conference.

An inconsistency

SOUTH AFRICA IS REPORTED to be attempting to induce the Soviet-backed faction in Angola, the Popular Movement, to talk about peace and possibly a coalition government for the ravaged former Portuguese colony.

In this endeavor the South Africans are supported by a group of Black African nations, including Tanzania, where Julius Nyerere's government has already recognized as de facto the Communist-supported rule of Agostimho Neto.

Both Great Britain and France are using what influence they possess towards similar ends and United Nations Secretary General Kurt Wallheim has offered to mediate.

Angola's neighbor states, Zaire and Zambia, the former headed by President Mobutu Sese Seko, the latter by President Kenneth Kaunda, are anxious for peace for two reasons: the pro-western parties which they supported very generously appear at this point to be broken beyond hope of restoration militarily; and both countries can be isolated and their exports throttled if an unfriendly Angola administration cares to slam the doors on the exits to the coast.

Like the government at Ottawa, President Mobutu appears prepared to recognize a government in Angola dominated by the Popular Movement; but unlike Canada he has insisted — so far — that it include representatives of opposition groups before he will acknowledge it.

The United States too, is believed to be working behind the scenes in the hope of stabilizing the Angola situation through compromise.

Even in Moscow, where there must be considerable satisfaction at the success of its intervention with arms and experts, and the Cuban "volunteers," there have been signs of a willingness to compromise. Izvestia, a publication that speaks semi-officially on foreign affairs, has urged a coalition of a "all patriotic Angolan forces."

The atmosphere, therefore, appeared to have become relatively hopeful. Or at least it was until Sunday, when at a banquet in Peking China's Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-Hua declared his country would "resolutely support" all efforts to drive the Soviet and Cuban forces out of Angola. This reassurance he delivered for the benefit of his guests, a party of officials from Strongman Mobutu's Zaire. And the foreign minister added that "anti-Soviet strength will surely be able to oust all outside interference" from Angola.

Diplomatic analysts in Hong Kong conclude this statement of policy means China is prepared to lend large-scale military aid to the anti-Soviet factions in Angola; but since this can only be delivered through Zambia or Zaire the prospect is for further turmoil on the Africa scene.

Everyone, it seems, preaches piously of non-intervention until circumstances appear to make it profitable.

This applies to the Organization of African Unity as much as to any other party or nation. Its council openly supports the Palestinian Liberation Organization's cause against Israel and has had no word of complaint about the Soviet-Cuban role in Angola. And yet it "most vehemently condemns," and it stated last March, "any move by any country to import into Africa the odious practice of political destabilization."

Apparently, in the eyes of the OAU, this is not happening in Angola. It depend upon who is perpetrating "destabilization" whether the OAU will recognize it as an "odious practice."

It will be interesting to see how China's new African policy will be received.

From the Dark Ages

IT IS HIS FIRM INTENTION, says Robert Andras, to introduce amendments to Parliament that will bring an end to discriminatory treatment of newcomers to Canada who have epileptic problems.

The federal minister who oversees the Immigration Act has given assurance that this will be included in a general overhaul of the regulations some time in the future.

There are those who are saying this isn't good enough: it could be lost in the shuffle as so often happens in "package" legislation.

As the law now stands, epileptic immigrants may enter Canada only by ministerial permit which doesn't make them anything more than a guest in the country. However privileged they may be, they are denied landed immigrant status which continues to make them outsiders: they can't call Canada home until they are officially stamped as "landed." Some have had their permits renewed from year to year, but it makes no difference.

The discrimination is compounded by ignorance of epilepsy itself. Mention the word and all too often there is a feeling of revulsion at thoughts of people writhing on the ground in "mad dog" fits. Epilepsy is a nerve disease that modern medicine has beaten to give the afflicted as normal a life as anyone.

A stigma of madness remains, nevertheless, which can work against a newcomer seeking employment and having to explain troubles over obtaining landed immigrant status because of a nervous system problem.

The wrongfulness of the immigration regulation can be seen in the fact that there are no barriers against new arrivals who may be suffering much more serious illnesses which are not apparent.

For this reason alone Mr. Andras should not be taking what The Toronto Star calls "a leisurely attitude" towards righting the wrong. The Star says the minister is "embarrassed by an outdated section of the Immigration Act barring epileptics from emigrating to Canada." It would appear to be more of an uncaring attitude, even though he says he will do something. The "something" should be done immediately. There shouldn't be any difficulty. There would be no Opposition arguments to hinder him as there undoubtedly will be in other planned changes to immigration regulations. He is reported to have been given this understanding.

Washington Calling

A nuclear reaction

By MARQUIS CHILDS

A recent piece of news that failed to make the splashy front page headlines and may well have escaped the notice of the average newspaper reader had more to say about the future of mankind than anything in a very long time.

Alongside it, the reports of speeches of the assorted presidential candidates sounded like the chirrupings of a company of grasshoppers just before the onset of winter.

Three engineer-administrators in California who have spent their entire careers building nuclear reactors for General Electric resigned in opposition to the further spread of nuclear power. In their resignation statements they said there was no way to continue building and operating nuclear plants without having an accident.

Distinguished nuclear physicists like Theodore Taylor, who pioneered in much of the work at Los Alamos, have repeatedly warned of the peril of the wide diffusion of fissile material. An explosion releasing massive radiation into the atmosphere could cause thousands of deaths.

Taylor and others have also warned of the danger of theft by terrorists of material that could be forged into a homemade bomb that could be used for blackmail purposes with whole communities held as pawn.

The three GE specialists, Dale G. Bridenbaugh, Gregory C. Minor and Richard B. Hubbard, have been called to testify before the congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. Another witness will be Robert Pollard, who resigned from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for the same reasons. The three Californians will work for the initiative proposal on the California June primary ballot that could eventually lead to the prohibition of nuclear reactors in that state.

"My reason for leaving is a deep conviction that nuclear reactors and nuclear weapons now present serious danger to the future of all life on this planet," Minor, manager for advanced controls and administration, said in his letter of resignation.

In light of the fantastic development of nuclear power plants this looks a bit like locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen. Currently 56 nuclear power plants are operating and 69 are under construction. The size of the investment can be gauged by the average cost of such a plant which is between $600 million and $1 billion.

By 1985, it is estimated that there will be from 150 to 189 plants in operation, producing about 18 per cent of the total electrical energy consumed in this country.

Thus far only one nuclear power plant has suffered major damage. By a careless accident, a fire was set off a year ago in the Brown's Ferry plant of the Tennessee Valley Authority at Decatur, Ala., the largest nuclear reactor complex in the world. Rehabilitation is being completed and, according to TVA, Brown's Ferry will be in operation by next month. When TVA's nuclear program is completed in 1982 the authority will have seven plants powered by nuclear reactors.

The fact that no radioactive material was released in the Brown's Ferry fire is taken by specialists at the Nuclear Regulatory Agency as proof that present safeguards are adequate.

But the Brown's Ferry fire was cited by the GE executives who resigned as one reason for their action. They listed, too, both the nuclear explosion set off by India with plutonium from fuel that had been supplied by Canada for peaceful purposes and the American decision to sell reactors to Egypt and Israel.

"The Brown's Ferry incident showed human fallacy," Hubbard said. "I have been involved in making a lot of field fixes in reactors and I have developed a strong feeling that we don't really know what is going on inside a reactor."

The rationalization for foreign sales by top executives and by officials of the Regulatory Agency is that if the United States were to turn down such sales other countries, notably France, would step in. Nuclear power is spreading around the world with remarkable rapidity. Recently West Germany sold Brazil a complete nuclear fuel cycle.

According to a recent government report, GE is the world's largest manufacturer of nuclear equipment, having supplied 27 of the 99 reactors reportedly operating around the world as of late 1974.

The dispute over the use of nuclear power is a contest in which the environmentalists have steadily lost out. But with three new recruits with intimate knowledge, their case will be markedly strengthened.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION

Losing the liberties we take for granted

Accumulated evidence

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

It's standard practice for smart politicans when they get in trouble to create a spectacular diversion.

Prime Minister Trudeau, some observers here believe, is a politican in trouble. The economy, which he never understood and systematically abused by government overspending and waste, is faltering and spawning social unrest. The over-permissiveness and irresponsibility Trudeau's "anti-establishment constant" (i.e., perpetual adolescent rebelliousness) encouraged are tearing apart Canada's spiritual and moral fabric. The resulting strains and stresses are warping our institutional framework so badly that even the unperturbable ruling Liberal party is getting upset and developing cracks.

Purveyors of this interpretation of the growing turmoil in this once stable and stolid country, maintain that Trudeau, whose daydreaming was really shaken only last fall by John Turner's resignation from the cabinet, now realizes that he is in real trouble despite his 1974 election victory and is doing his damndest to divert attention from the mess eight years of mismanagment of public affairs has produced.

Since Trudeau's way of diverting attention from his difficulties is to shock people, these oracles say, we had a whole series of prime ministerial shocks since the Turner resignation. First there was the Thanksgiving Day somersault on price-income controls. Then the year-end dismissal of the free market system as unworkable in Canada, and latterly the "Viva Castro" performance in Cuba.

This version of the shocks of the last six months or so would have us believe that the prime minister is essentially a simpleton. Not knowing where he is going and what he is doing, he is deemed to have boxed himself into a blind corner and thrashes around wildly to distract attention from his predicament.

It's a nice try to allay growing fears that Trudeau is, as a few of his early critics have been saying all along, a menace to the country. Unfortunately for the soothsayers, the PM has pulled the rug of self-deceptions from under their feet.

To consider their thesis remotely conceivable and believable, one would have to be utterly ignorant of Trudeau's record. While many Canadians may still not have bothered to examine Trudeau's political essays or consider them irrelevant, his impact on this country's public life and general direction since he became prime minister is self-evident and cannot be ignored.

Even a cursory glance at Trudeau's record in office shows a consistent, carefully planned and systematically applied effort to render the economic, political and social accomplishments of Canada's historical evolution unworkable so that the PM could eventually say: The system does not work and has to be replaced by what he now calls "New Society." (In his political essays he called it, more fittingly, "benign despotism" which, in his elitist arrogance, he considered to be the highest form of democracy).

With nothing in this long-sheltered and extremely lucky country's history to prepare Canadians for the guiles of a messianic autocrat, it has been excruciatingly difficult for most people to face the mounting evidence of Trudeau's real objectives.

The difficulty is still there, for the idea of our freely elected prime minister seeking to change the democratic structure of the country without being stopped by his cabinet and kicked out of office by his party before he could do any real harm is so strange and preposterous that it is indeed very difficult to swallow.

Yet unless the emotional roadblock is overcome pretty fast and the unbelievable faced squarely on the basis of accumulated evidence, it's impossible to understand what is happening to Canada and how perilously close we are to losing the liberties we take for granted. Nor is it possible to grasp that Trudeau's "Viva Castro" cry in Cienfuegos (which happens to be the main Soviet naval base in Cuba, not just a sunny sugar town) had a profound meaning in its revelation of our prime minister's genuine feelings, aspirations and objectives.

The fact that Trudeau now says and does openly what he used to camouflage and conceal, could very well mean that he does not give a damn who he offends, alarms or scares. Not because of some alleged mortal weakness, though, but because he apparently feels so secure with the pitiful display of his opposition's impotence in and out of Parliament that he can stop playing games, and to hell with everybody.

Cuba's thinking:

U.S. declining fast

By WILLIAM GIANDONI

Cuban Premier Fidel Castro may be harder for the United States to deal with now than before Angola.

Prior to disclosure of the Cuban Communist action in the former Portuguese African colony, thoughtful Cubanologists were predicting that negotiations between Havana and Washington were going to be difficult, if not virtually impossible.

That educated guess was based on Castro's obvious conviction that the United States is entering an era of swift and permanent decline, that U.S. imperialism is weakening fast.

U.S. reverses in Indochina, Watergate, the energy crisis and the economic recessions were what Castro had to go on then.

More recently, though, U.S. inability even to mobilize public opinion at home against Cuban intervention in Africa may be cited as further proof of the degree of internal division that emboldens Castro and his government.

Nevertheless, says one Cuban expert, Roger W. Fontaine, director of Latin American Studies, Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., "relations with Cuba are inevitable, though not necessarily desirable."

The United States should "reverse its policy of isolating Cuba and begin the long process of tempting Cuba back from the neo-Stalinist society that its leaders are now busily constructing," Fontaine writes in his recently published book, "On Negotiating with Cuba."

The task is not going to be easy and, in fact, Fontaine sets down more reasons to conclude it may be more impossible than those that might justify optimism.

However, the two nations will have to start dealing with each other, if only to achieve their objectives.

"The long-term goal for the United States can be no less than the ending of the Marxist-Leninist regime in Cuba without resort to war, subversion, or even embargo," Fontaine says.

"The fall of capitalist America is the ultimate aim of the Cuba regime."

The United States' short-term goal should be severance of the Moscow connection, at least to the point where Cuba would "be eliminated as forward military base" for the Soviet Union.

In future negotiations, Fontaine envisions the surrender to Cuba of the U.S. Navy station at Guantanamo, but, he adds, "under no circumstances can those facilities then be made available to the Kremlin."

Perhaps the greatest obstacle to re-establishment of formal relations between the United States and Cuba is Premier Castro himself. Castro "is a volatile, ambitious leader who defies prediction," Fontaine writes. "A tough, clever, and ultimately ruthless opponent."

Recent history suggests, though, that even Fontaine underestimated Castro. He wrote that "circumstances may have compelled Fidel Castro to trim here and there, but his deepest feelings are not likely to have changed.

"They merely remain in check until the moment is again favorable for old-fashioned, romantic revolution throughout the hemisphere."

Instead of that, the Cuban Communists pulled off a modern-day, militarily precise airlift part way around the world, to Angola.

To the editor

Nuclear weaponry

The January 25 edition of The Daily Colonist featured a front page article in which the chief official of NORAD, General Daniel James, was quoted as saying "We can only hope that nuclear weapons do not get into the hands of a nation that will use them irresponsibly." Can General James tell us how nuclear weapons are used responsibly by any nation currently possessing a nuclear arsenal?

In the same edition of the Colonist we learn that China detonated a nuclear device at Lop Nor in order to be "prepared against war." Undoubtedly they, like the United States and Russia, view this experimental use of nuclear weaponry in the light of "responsibility."

I wish to make one other point which I feel very strongly about. The question of whether or not nuclear weapons are ever employed in a physical assault by one nation upon another is of secondary importance. Those weapons are now being used in an extremely malevolent way. They hold every human being on this planet hostage in a nuclear drama ostensibly being enacted in the name of cherished principles, religious creeds and political systems. That and the very existence of nuclear weapons should offend everyone's sense of human dignity.

Disaster

I wonder how many other people are saddened to see the ecological disaster that has struck our once beautiful Oak Bay beaches. What once were acres of white sand and clear clean ocean are now a disgusting slimy mess since the breakwater was built. Green and brown slime covered boulders now replace the deep white sand that once piled up against the sea wall the full length of the beach in front of the Rudyard Kipling. Two dead birds, the carcass of a filleted fish, a boat cushion, innumerable plastic bags and much unidentifiable garbage littered the shoreline this morning. The ocean is the color of cold wash water and at low tide the stench by the oak tree is almost unbelievable. Rattenbury beach, where my children and thousands of others once waded, now has a "Water Polluted" sign on it.

The federal government spent one million dollars of our tax money to build that breakwater and our ex-mayor Elford and council permitted that land to be leased to Oak Bay Marina; now this same company wants to impose this disaster on the people in Saanichton Bay. I hope the Native people of the Tsawout Band fight like tigers to save their waterfront from the ecological and social impact of a marina such as we are saddled with here. Our children deserve better treatment than this.

We hear so much about the destructiveness of our younger generation but the damage they do is so small compared to the irreversible damage done to our once beautiful Oak Bay beaches by this breakwater and marina; and all in the sanctimonious name of private enterprise and profit.

No cop-out

In response to the article "Priests label TM a cop-out" in your paper January 29, I would simply like to state that my personal experince is in conflict with the views of Drs. Campbell and McMahon. Transcendental Meditation is far from being a "cop-out". It is a simple technique whereby the meditator finds relaxation and discovers hidden reserves of strength and clarity of mind as a result. It is as natural and addictive as jogging. As an exercise its effects extend into everyday life just as the physical effects of regular jogging improve everyday life. McMahon says, "It (meditation) can only override it (worry) momentarily by altering consciousness" and therefore a dependency is developed. I find, however that I meditate not out of depression or fear of depression but out of a feeling of joy and anticipation — one enjoys the feelings of growth.

TM is not a method of momentarily escaping our problems — or of avoiding "the slow, painful task of long-term constructive change" — it is the opposite. The relaxation it engenders provides us with the strength, self-confidence and courage to grapple with problems now, make short work of them and go on to bigger and better challenges. Personally, I have given up smoking, seen my life make an about face and improve in innumerable ways since I started TM a short time ago. I cope much better now than when I felt bombarded with a thousand irritations and frustrations and therefore can act more constructively, effectively and efficiently.

Finally, McMahon suggests that pockets of people who meditate would be vulnerable to totalitarian governments. From studies of cities where more than one per cent of the people meditate it has been shown that the quality of life improves — that crime diminishes and therefore the necessity and desirability for authoritarian forms of restraint is subsequently diminished.

I must disagree with these professors: TM is a path to personal fulfillment and freedom, certainly not a dangerous, addictive cop-out from pain. Pain itself is neither good nor bad, it is merely the body's indicator that change is necessary; TM helps us to make the necessary changes in our lives now, and not to glory in the "slow, painful task . . ."

Morals

Admittedly there may be other factors influencing Justice Wootton's decision not to allow a woman to have a lover under her own roof, but when he spouts "we still have some moral attitude in this community" I see red.

Whose morality is he selling, rather legally imposing on someone who may think and feel differently from him. Justice Wootton, sex is not wrong nor morally corrupting for an adult or a child. Marriage isn't the necessary expression of relationship, and more importantly, you've no right to impose your own morality on another free being.

'Able'

A century ago a young lad, like many of his generation, had to walk long miles to school.

It wasn't because he could not afford insurance on his car. He had no car. Not even a bicycle. Only "Shanks' mare."

He came from an underprivileged home. There was no electric refrigerator to run to for after-school snacks. In fact, there was no electricity. No oil heating — only a log fire by whose flickering light he studied. No television. Not even a radio.

There was little prospect of his getting far in life. His education, in the formal sense, was elementary. Yet somehow he learned to read, write and spell. His school had no football team — no basketball team. No cheer-leaders. No students' demonstrations. No millions of taxpayer dollars to smooth the way. Yet somehow the boy who studied by the light of the burning logs grew up to be a lawyer. He became the author of the Gettysburg address.

And his was the hand that, as president of the United States of America, signed the document that in his land abolished the ownership of men by other men — that gave freedom to tens and tens of thousands of other underprivileged human beings.

His name was Lincoln. He never heard of the ICBC.

Quit

Coquitlam constituency does not have an elected member of the legislative assembly. I wonder how many more recounts and judicial appeals we must go through before Dave Barrett and his caucus will come to the reality that they have been defeated.

Previous NDP leaders have gone to defeat and they have taken it well. Look at Tommy Douglas and Tom Berger; they have suffered defeat within their own constituencies but they took it with a smile and did not try to desperately hang on. The people have spoken democratically, let the former premier abide with that decision.

A chance

What do people expect? They want Premier Bennett to clean up a mess in one month it took the NDP government two and a half years to put us into. We will be lucky to see any change in a year. If they question the car insurance what would have happened had the NDP stayed in power. Where would they have got the money? Heaven help us. Furthermore, we really don't know how much debt they put us into. Gradually we will get a few more shockers. Why all the expense for new furniture at the Parliament Buildings which put us into debt a few thousand dollars and is falling apart. Today we see in the paper about a railroad car bought in Germany. What for? Only a few things to be mentioned.

So my dear B.C. people, give Premier Bennett a chance at least to see what he can do in good time. Can't be done overnight.

By DOUG SMALL
Canadian Press
from Ottawa

Midway through the last Conservative leadership contest in September, 1967, candidate George Hees, his face flushed, was seen striding down an empty convention hotel corridor muttering enthusiastically to himself: "Gee, isn't this great. How do you do? I'm George Hees, Golly."

Nine years later, the same tall, trim, hail-fellow-well-met says he feels far better able to run the party, and the country, than he did then.

But now, he says, people think he's too old.

"It used to be that you weren't considered to have sound judgment until you were 60," says the 25-year veteran MP from Prince Edward-Hastings as he laments the younger age of those in the field in the current Conservative leadership fight which culminates in the 1976 convention next Thursday to Sunday.

Mr. Hees is 65. When he and 10 others lined up for the 1967 contest their average age was just more than 55, compared with the 46-year average age of those running for the job this time around.

There was only one candidate in the 1967 battle, however, who was well into the age of "sound judgment" — party leader John Diefenbaker, 71. In what was probably one of the country's bitterest political conventions, he was replaced by a younger man.

Remember?

The 1967 September convention had its beginnings in an acrid party meeting the November before, when party president Dalton Camp helped engineer a decision by the Conservative national association to hold a leadership review.

The Chief had been head of the party since 1956, but when he lost the general election of 1963, a number of Conservatives decided it was time for another leader.

Mr. Diefenbaker still speaks contemptuously of "the Campers" who challenged him that November and precipitated his downfall the following autumn.

When the convention began, however, no one knew whether Mr. Diefenbaker would be running or not. Declared candidates included six former Diefenbaker cabinet ministers, Brockville, Ont., car dealer John Maclean, grandmother Mary Sawka, a Torontonian who described herself as "the last angry woman," and two provincial premiers.

One of the premiers was 50-year-old Duff Roblin of Manitoba. The other was Robert Stanfield, 53, premier of Nova Scotia and a man who had said only months before that he would sooner take up ski-jumping that the leadership of the Conservatives.

The convention itself was five days long, held variously in the Royal York Hotel and Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto. It was the first major Canadian crack at American-style political hoop-la in the frenzied band-balloon-and-lots-of-pretty-girls tradition. As many as 10,000 attended, although only about 2,400 were voting delegates. Men sported fresh haircuts. Women came in mini-skirts. Only Mrs. Roblin and Mrs. Diefenbaker wore hats.

The country still was on its Centennial binge.

The big issue for Conservatives was the two-nations concept, and Mr. Diefenbaker made it his own. In the Thursday before the Saturday vote he was given a thunderous reception by thousands in the Gardens, and he implored them to reject the idea that Canada could be more than one nation.

Delegates, he said, would decide his future when they decided on that policy.

The following morning — Friday — they did. When the Chief submitted his nomination papers at the last moment, Conservatives for the most part had decided to ignore him.

And Saturday, after three cruel ballots, he withdrew. He drew only 114 votes on the third round.

"My course has come to an end," he said.

Robert Stanfield, meanwhile, pick of the party insiders, built his support through the five days, and led on all five ballots. His approach, like the man, was quiet and low-key, and his backers were coolly professional.

The Stanfield victory was assured when, after the fourth ballot, third-place finisher Davie Fulton threw his support behind the Nova Scotia premier, leaving Premier Roblin in second place. On the last ballot Mr. Stanfield collected 1,150 votes; Mr. Roblin 969.

What became of those 11 who shared the political spotlight nine years ago?

Mr. Diefenbaker, of course, decided to stay in the party, has successfully defended his Prince Albert riding during three subsequent elections and has remained a thorn in the side of the Stanfield-led party.

He now says he is certain he made the right decision.

"I would never have known with what esteem I am held by the Canadian people if I had quit politics then," he says with the same stout voice he accepted his defeat on that Saturday in September.

All 11 candidates in the current race have been courting his support. This time round he will be given another Thursday-night chance to speak to the convention, and he hints that he will use it to say which of the contenders he favors.

Mr. Stanfield has spent the last nine years rebuilding the party, patching a never-ending series of rifts, and losing three general elections with the same low-keyed manner, wit and grace that brought him to the leadership.

Second-place finisher Duff Roblin returned to Manitoba, became president of Canadian Pacific Investments and attempted a political come-back in the federal election of 1974. But he lost to Hugh Faulkner in the Peterborough riding which Mr. Faulkner had held up to the election call. Mr. Roblin now is said to be in the consulting business.

Mr. Hees and Alvin Hamilton retained their seats and remain on the Conservative front-benches.

Mr. Hamilton, 63, a one-time Saskatchewan farm hand, school teacher and agriculture minister, says he would run again if enough Conservatives wanted him to. Not enough, however, have asked.

He says the days of block votes and party power brokers are largely over, and that delegates will choose the party's next leader in a truly democratic way.

"I used to be able to command 150 votes, but not any more," he says.

Donald Fleming, 70, a former finance minister who tried for the Conservative leadership in 1948 and 1956 as well as 1967, now works in Nassau for those who want to find an off-shore haven for their investments.

Davie Fulton, 59, of Kamloops, Mr. Diefenbaker's former justice minister and a leadership aspirant in both the 1956 and 1967 fights, is a judge in British Columbia.

Michael Starr, 64, a former blue-collar worker, once mayor of Oshawa, Ont., and labor minister under Mr. Diefenbaker, was found living nearly penniless in a cottage two years after the 1967 convention. After the story broke, he was appointed a citizenship court judge and now is chairman of Ontario's Workman's Compensation Board.

Car dealer John Maclean, 48, wrote a book about the convention and still keeps in touch with Ottawa's political action. Mary Sawka, who polled only two votes at the convention no longer is listed in the Toronto telephone directory, and has dropped from sight.

And Senator M. Wallace McCutcheon, the unabashedly right-wing Toronto financier who completed the list, is dead.

These are the six letters I got last year.

ON MANNERS: "Your column on manners brought back memories of our daughter. We had a freshly baked cake cooling on top of the refrigerator and of course she spotted it and began yelling, 'Pie, pie, pie.' (Do your kids call cake, pie, and pie, cake?)

"I finally cut her a piece and in handing it to her said, 'Now, what do you say?' With a wide smile and blue eyes sparkling she muttered, softly, 'Spoon.' "

ON WEIGHT: "At the close of the Second World War, one of the first missions the army undertook in the invasion of the Philippines was the rescue of allied civilians being held at the infamous San Tomas POW camp outside Manila.

"An army doctor helped one of the first liberated American women on the scales and called out, 'This woman is five feet seven inches tall. She weighs 65 pounds.'

" 'Sixty-five pounds,' screeched the former prisoner. 'That's wonderful. Now if I can just lose five more pounds, I'll be just right!' "

ON DISCIPLINE: "When our kids were small, my wife and I would take turns being the 'bad guy' so that I wasn't always the bogey man with the spankin bit. She'd take a month and I'd take a month to even it out. We referred to one another as the designated hitter."

ON LETTER WRITERS: "When our son was in college and failed to write for some time, my husband and I would send him a newsy letter in which we would say, "Thought you might need a little more money. Enclosed is a cheque.' Of course we left the cheque out.

"Almost immediately, we received a very newsy letter with a casual P.S. saying, 'By the way, you forgot to enclose the cheque.'"

ON UPMANSHIP: "A child psychologist was breakfasting with his daughter, who refused to eat. She insisted on being served a fried worm. The fried worm was brought in and the father told her to eat. The child said, 'You eat half of it!' The father complied and the child whined, 'You just ate my half.'"

ON DOGS: "You, lady can go to h-! You don't know anything about dogs. They are better than people. They're kinder. Smarter. And care about you. I promise you if you write another column about dogs, I am not going to take your d-newspaper! Have a good day."

"Take all you want. Resources are unlimited in this country."

Strengthen the Islands Trust

By R. S. DICKOUT

We, the members of the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association, have noted recently in the press that changes may be made to the Islands Trust. In another report, Capital Regional District chairman James Campbell states that the trust is a waste of money and should be abolished.

This association supports the aim of the Islands Trust as outlined in the Islands Trust Act, namely —

> "to preserve and protect, in co-operation with municipalities and the government of the province, the trust area and its unique amenities and environment for the benefit of the residents of the trust area and of the province generally."

We cannot agree that this body be abolished. Changes may indeed be required, but we hope that any proposed changes will further strengthen its function. To do anything less would be a decided backward step at a time when protection of our environment is paramount, in particular, the unique environment of the Gulf Islands. Population pressure in this part of B.C. means that provision of parks, public access to the shoreline, and properly planned housing developments is of utmost importance.

A report by the Nature Conservancy of Canada states that the Strait of Georgia is one of the most significant recreational and ecological areas in the world. Therefore, the region deserves greater attention from all levels of government particularly in terms of land acquisition and dedication of areas as parks, recreation areas, nature preserves and ecological reserves as well as stricter regulation of resource exploitation and development.

We feel that the Islands Trust has attempted to ensure that proper planning be carried out, but more must be done. Less than 15 per cent of the shoreline in the Islands Trust area is publicly owned, and only about 4 per cent of the land dedicated to environmental protection or outdoor recreation. Sewage disposal and adequate potable water supplies are a particular problem in this area when subdivision proposals are made.

According to the Islands Trust brief to the Royal Commission on Forest Resources in regard to certified tree farms held by forest companies on the islands, a difficult problem is the right of those companies to withdraw their land from tree farm status at any time. Land which has been taxed at a very low rate on the basis of its forest cover only may suddenly become developable land. A serious case in point is the situation on Galiano Island where 79 per cent of the island is in part of Tree Farm No. 19 owned by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. In 1972 that company announced a plan to create up to about 2,700 small lots on a portion of that tree farm land. The proposed subdivision would have made it possible for the potential population on the island to increase fifteen-fold, to over 7,000. This increased population would have overwhelmed and altered the existing community. After a very loud public outcry the plan was abandoned. However, the potential economic gain continues to grow and the pressure for subdivision will continue not only on Galiano, but also on Gabriola, Denman, Salt Spring and others.

We sincerely hope that the Islands Trust continues to exercise proper controls over the land use plans of the seven regional districts which are included in the Islands Trust area to ensure a uniformity of proper land use.

Attacks on Teng point to China political fight

HONG KONG — In charges identical to those made against him when he was purged during the cultural revoltion a decade ago, vice premier Teng Hsiao-ping is being accused of putting economic development ahead of politics.

This is only part of the criticism by leftist radicals in a political struggle that appears to be targeted against the 71-year-old Teng who made one of the most remarkable political comebacks in the history of communist China.

A Shanghai radio broadcast Monday said the "current class struggle" was "personally initiated" by Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung.

But this does not necessarily mean that Mao is opposed to Teng. Persistent political struggle is the cornerstone of his political philosophy. It encourages criticism of the top leadership.

The attacks, however, have the earmarks of a major political struggle in view of the death of premier Chou En-Lai last month.

Brush with death started with rock

Still shaking almost 24 hours after a shattering experience Sunday, a Victoria mother of three Monday told a story of a close brush with death in hopes that those responsible will stop short of killing someone.

Darlene Burry, 7 Heyward Heights, said she was driving her car along West Saanich Road toward Royal Oak, heading home with son Glenn, 15, and daughters Patricia, 11, and Sherri, 9, when "I heard a big bang .... I thought it was a blowout."

A fist-sized rock had been thrown through the second window on the left side, landing in Patricia's lap and showering the girl with glass fragments. She had facial bruises, one finger was cut and she became hysterical.

Mrs. Burry stopped the car and Glenn jumped out to find the rock thrower. She heard sounds of people running through nearby bushes but found no one.

Later, a woman resident in the area told Mrs. Burry she heard boys "laughing as they ran by her house" and police said the problem had occurred before but the culprits had never been found.

Mrs. Burry said she decided before starting the car trip to move Sherri into the front seat with Glenn and herself. Because of that, Patricia moved to the centre of the back seat.

"Otherwise, she would have been right against that window," said the distraught mother. "And if the rock had hit me, I definitely would not be here to tell you the story.

"I'm still so upset I want something done. Maybe somebody might die next time."

Rebates for all—Grit

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Monday the 25 per cent rebate on 25-year-and-under automobile insurance should be extended to all drivers in B.C.

Gibson, back in the province after a vacation in Hawaii, was commenting on the 25 per cent rebate offered under 25s last Thursday providing they complete a full year of accident-free driving.

Pat McGeer, the cabinet minister in charge of the Insurance Corp. of B.C., has since stated that an accident-free year means a year in which the insurance policy owner was not responsible for an accident. McGeer said that if a driver, for example, was involved in an incident with a hit-and-run-driver such a claim would not be regarded as a claim against his insurance.

That concession, apparently, was not good enough for Gibson.

"If it (the 25 per cent rebate) is sound for one group, it's sound for all," Gibson said. "This would be an immediate, tangible incentive for safe driving."

Gibson said the system of rebates for good driving was not new.

"Insurance companies in other areas have been following this system for years," he said. "Discounts and rebates are offered for one, two, three and more years of claim-free driving, while claim experience is surcharged."

The Liberal leader said insurance costs should be "based on controllable risk rather than uncontrollable cir-

Conventional

France boosts arms outlay

PARIS (Reuter) — France is planning big increases in its military spending over the next few years, and the trend now is to build up the country's conventional forces.

Expenditure on nuclear missiles will take about one-third of this years's 50-billion-francs (about $10-billion) defence budget. But a higher proportion will in future be spent on developing conventional weapons and giving the armed forces greater facilities.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing has approved a 16-per-cent increase in the 1977 defence budget totalling 58 billion francs (about $11.6 billion) and by 1980 military spending will be increased to 20 per cent of the over-all budget.

The French president has said that an independent defence policy remains an essential tenet of French global strategy.

France says it is the world's third nuclear military power with its three missile-firing nuclear submarines and landbased missiles being equipped with megaton-size warheads.

But former defence minister Michel Debre says that the country's conventional forces have not been given enough attention in recent years.

President Giscard d'Estaing now recognizes the need to build up the conventional forces.

His thinking has been influenced by the growing body of military leaders, including Chief of Staff General Guy Mery, who says that while a nuclear war cannot be entirely ruled out in the future, it is more realistic to plan for limited conflicts.

France's armed forces total 600,000 men, compared with West Germany's 495,000 and Britain's 345,000. The French army has 330,000 men compared with 350,000 serving in the Bundeswehr and 171,000 in the British army.

The French navy has a complement of 70,000, compared with the Royal Navy's 77,000 and West Germany's 37,000. The French air force total 104,000 men compared with 100,000 in the Luftwaffe and 97,000 in the Royal Air Force.

The French army has five divisions, two in Germany and three in France.

The majority of French people is against a professional army.

General Marcel Bigeard, the former paratroop chief who now is secretary of state for defence in charge of army reform, said: "It is much easier, in a way, if you have professionals. But it costs more and who would want nowadays to serve as a regular corporal?"

France is concerned over the Russian naval buildup in the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean.

Giscard d'Estaing has ordered strengthening of the French Mediterranean fleet with the dispatch of two aircraft carriers and supporting vessels from their Atlantic bases.

He also sent a helicopter carrier and several missile-launching vessels to reinforce the French fleet in the Red Sea and Indian Ocean. It was the first time that France had added submarines to its fleet in the Indian Ocean.

The president has announced that he is granting independence to the French territory of the Afars and Issas shortly, but he is determined to hold on to the French base at Djibouti, the French naval and air base on the Red Sea, at the gateway of the Indian Ocean.

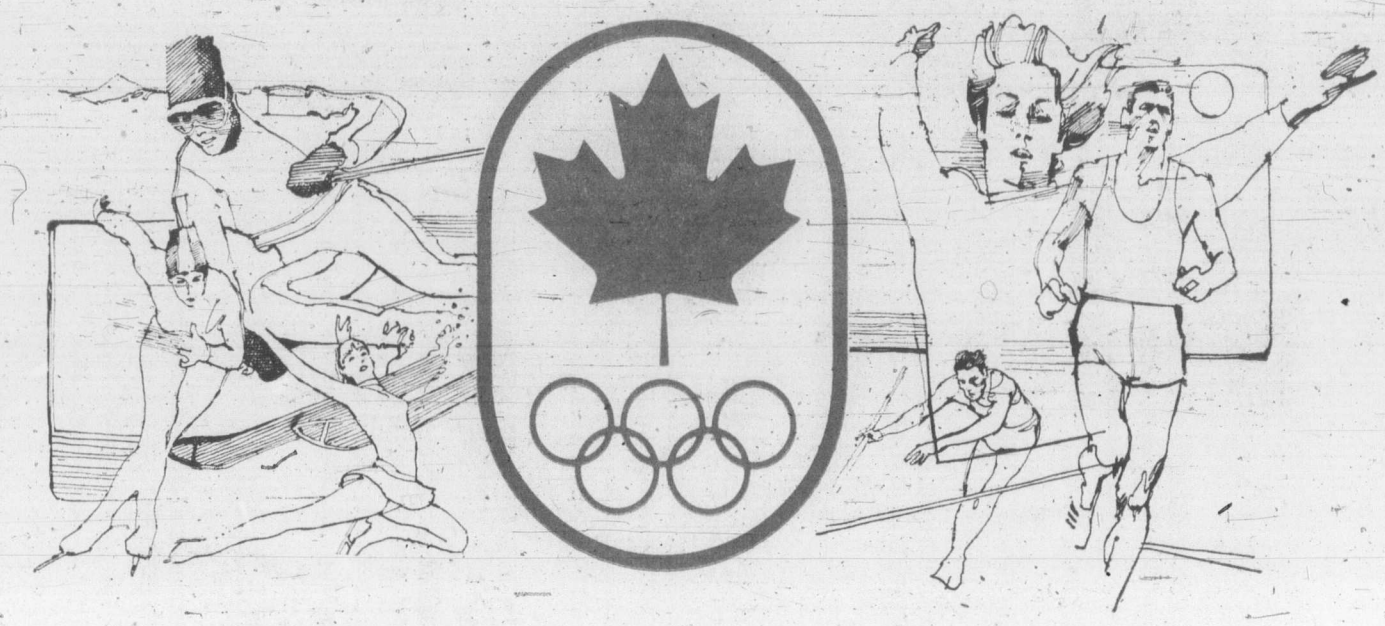

As Russian naval might grows, the French navy now is equipped with Flying Fish ship-to-ship missiles as well as anti-aircraft missiles. It also plans to have 20 nuclear-powered submarines firing conventional torpedoes.

The French government's main effort now is directed towards the army, faced with a growing malaise among officers who want more sophisticated weapons.

The Canadian Cancer Society's Greater Victoria branch moved a little closer to its goal with a $500 donation recently from Oak Bay Lions Club. Target for the area this year is $150,000. More than $140,000 was raised by the society in Greater Victoria in 1975, a record. Contributions are turned over to the society's Vancouver Island branch.

Volume 2.29 million.

The industrial index rose .60 to 192.35, its best since July 22, golds .14 to 287.16, a high since Oct. 22.

Base metals, reaching their highest levels since May 14, 1974, gained .16 to 85.45 and western oils .69 to 215.37, highest close since May 6, 1974 when it was 221.45.

Analysts said there was little in the news background to account for the market's rise and many had predicted that trading would be slow because the New York market was closed in observance of George Washington's birthday.

Bank shares, which have generally been excluded from the market's rally since the beginning of the year, recorded the biggest gains. Analysts said investors have been cautious towards shares of bank because of the possibility of government controls restricting profits and dividends.

Atco Industries A at $14½ and 15,400 United Trust at $4.05. Great Lakes Paper, which ratified a contract with striking members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union, gained ⅜ to $27⅝.

Insurance plan for mutual funds

TORONTO (CP) — The T. Eaton Co. has introduced an insurance plan to protect small investors from stock market losses.

The company said the insurance will be offered to buyers of the Eaton Viking mutual fund who hold their shares for at least 10 years.

The fund is a pool of money managed by investment industry professionals who aim to get the best possible return for the customers.

The insurance protection will be sold by Eaton Life Assurance Co.

Under the plan, investors who hold the mutual fund shares for at least 10 years would be assured of receiving what they paid although the market value of the shares might have declined.

Cost of the insurance is an annual payment of four-tenths of 1 per cent of the value of the original investment, which is $40 a year on an investment of $10,000.

The company said it is the first time a loss-protection plan for mutual funds has been made available in Canada.

It said the plan does not affect an investor's normal opportunity for profit should share values in the 10-year period increase behind the value of the original investment.

Deadline bothers companies

MONTREAL (CP) — The anti-inflation board's filing requirements are unrealistic and many companies will find it virtually impossible to meet deadlines, a Montreal accountant said Monday.

Don Huggett, a partner of the Coopers and Lybrand chartered accountants firm, said the Feb. 27 filing deadline will cause particular problems for some companies.

The board has stipulated that companies with 500 or more employees are required to file detailed reports on prices, profits and dividends by the end of next week.

In some cases the deadlines are "so unrealistic that they may damage the program," Huggett told about 120 corporation officials at a seminar organized by the accountant firm.

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts Monday at the Calgary public stockyards: 156 cattle, 10 calves and 1,143 hogs. Bulls 25-31.25, good feeder steers over 800 pounds 35-38. There were 863 hogs sold at average 55.58.

Cargill acquired Maidstone, Sask. elevators in 1963 — CP

U.S. firm cuts wide swath

Prairie pools hide concern

By JIM NEAVES

EDMONTON (CP) — With the entry of a giant United States-based multinational grain firm onto the Prairie scene, many farmers are expressing concern about the future of their own system.

Privately-owned grain firms have been small across the Prairies since the 1920s when farmers solved the problem of being exploited by private grain traders and the railway companies by forming their own co-operatibe grain-handling firms.

The farming community is divided between those who support Cargill Grain Co., Ltd., a subsidiary of the giant Cargill Inc., as a new stimulus to competition and those who forecast trouble ahead for the farmer-owned wheat pools which, they say, could not survive a sustained campaign to garner the major share of the wheat market.

Senior officials of the three Prairie wheat pools — Manitoba Pool Elevators, Alberta Wheat Pool and Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, the largest — are reticent to discuss openly their fears but privately admit concern.

The point to the number of younger farmers who did not experience the manipulation and exploitation 30 years ago and who are looking only for a higher return for their grain because or rapidly escalating production costs.

They are concerned they cannot match the financial resources of the huge Cargill empire, saying that loyalty to the co-operative system can only go so far. "How long can you remain loyal if another firm is paying a hefty premium on grain deliveries at an elevator," was the way one official put it.

Cargill Inc. employs more than 20,000 people in more than 300 plants in 43 countries. It has dismissed statements by critics who say it s not to destroy the farmer — owned wheat pools and then exploit grain producers.

The firm purchased National Grain Co. in 1963, giving it a ready-made country-elevator system with 184 delivery points. It plans to reduce these to 120 and now is building, at a cost near $4 million, two high-capacity elevators, one at Rosetown, Sask., and the other at Elm Creek, Man.

Roger Murray, Cargill president in Canada, has said the firm's building program will produce keen competition that can only benefit farmers whom elevator companies seek to attract with better, more efficient and less costly services.

He says the Prairie wheat pools were not expected to "lie down and die" as a result, but will compete both by modernizing and expanding their systems.

But pool officials point to the huge financial resources behnd Cargill which they could never match in a battle for the grain produced by the Prairie farmer.

Saskatchewan Pool's total assets now are worth about $250 million while Cargill Inc., spent $300 million in freight charges alone in 1974. Cargill's net worth is estimated at $600 million with sales in 1974 of about $6 billion.

Several grassroots farmers, admitted pool supporters, expressed amazement that Cargill's takeover of National Grain was approved after review under the federal foreign investment review legislation.

One said that Prairie grain-handling had been one sector of the economy almost fully Canadian-owned in contrast with most other sectors that are dominated by foreign capital.

During a recent visit to Saskatchewan, Senator George McGovern, Democratic presidential candidate in 1972, said the U.S. grain-handling system had not served the farmer well.

The senator said the Canadian system is better organized and more disciplined and the amount of corruption and bribery in sectors of the U.S. grain industry was a "national scandal."

Iran cuts price

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iran has lowefed its selling price for heavy crude oil in a bid for a bigger share of the sagging world market, a spokesman for the National Iranian Oil Company disclosed Monday.

He said the price of heavy crude dropped by 9.5 cents a barrel to $11.40 under a new price schedule that went into effect Saturday. He said there would be no official announcement.

The spokesman said Iran had held to the world price agreed on by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries even after other OPEC member states, such as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, pared their prices by about 10 or 11 cents since October.

Fumes allergy no joke

Even smoked fish makes her gasp

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

She's speaking in a literal and physical sense, since the slightest whiff of smoke sends her gasping for air.

Because Mrs. Kevis has an allergy to smoke, she cannot dine out, enjoy wiener roasts and beach fires, or even go shopping.

She has to avoid smoked salmon and bacon, and read food labels carefully to make sure that smoke, in any shape or form, is not one of the ingredients.

And she's wondering how people can be persuaded not to smoke in public places — and also how many Victorians share her problem.

"When I get into smoke I get pains in my chest, and I simply cannot breathe," she said in an interview.

"I ask people please not to smoke, and they look at me as if I'm some kind of a nut, and I have to go into all these explanations."

Mrs. Kevis does have other allergies.

She is, for insfance, allergic

Ms. Kevis
. . . resentful

to bee strings, and to pain-killing drugs.

"But that's not too much of a problem. I know about those things, and I can avoid bees, and drugs.

"The trouble is that I cannot avoid smoke unless I stay in the house all the time.

"I'm barred from public buildings because of the things other people choose to do."

The thing that bothers her most is her lack of control of the situation.

"I have a right to feel healthy," she says. "I did not choose this allergy.

"But people who choose to smoke make it impossible for me to be healthy."

The allergy strikes in unexpected situations.

"I went to vote in the provincial election and there were five or so people smoking in the hall. By the time they had my vote ready, it was all I could do to stay long enough to actually vote."

The smoke allergy descended upon her suddenly last fall, when she and her husband moved into their new house on Viaduct in Saanich.

"We hadn't had a fireplace before, and since it was such a novelty, we used it all the time.

"I started to develop headaches and to have a hard time breathing, but when I went to the doctor, he pinpointed the problem right away."

So the fireplace was locked securely behind glass doors, and her husband refrained from smoking in the house.

"I felt pretty well for about a week — then I made a mistake.

"Without giving the matter a thought, I ate some smoked salmon, and within about 10 minutes I was so sick I couldn't breathe.

"It still didn't occur to me that the food was causing the problem, but even when I stood by the window I couldn't get enough air.

"I hadn't had these symptons before, and it was my husband who suggested it might have been the food.

"When I told my doctor what had happened, he agreed, and said we should have called the fire department for some oxygen."

These days she is able to control the problem to some extent by breathing in some medication every day.

She can get downtown in the car if her husband starts the motor after she gets in, and if the car windows are kept shut.

But if she can avoid the car fumes in town, there are only a few stores that ban smoking, where she can shop in comfort.

Some restaurants do have no-smoking areas, but Mrs. Kevis says that unless they are also air-conditioned, the smoke spreads from the smoking areas.

Then there is the problem of shopping for groceries. There are smokers in the stores, and foods are not labelled very precisely.

"I'm never quite sure what is smoked and what isn't."

All in all, says Mrs. Kevis, it is the most annoying allergy of all.

"Mostly, I resent the fact that other people choose to pollute the air that I have to have pure."

Sound clears his path

HONG KONG (Reuter)— Bustling streets here pose few problems for Ivan Pivac, 29, of New Zealand who lost his eyesight in a childhood accident.

Armed with a long cane and a special pair of ultrasonic "spectacles," the third-year psychology student from Auckland is capable of wending his way through crowded streets and across busy roads.

Pivac is one of several blind persons here with the New Zealand-made spectacles—a sensing device that warns the wearer of obstacles in his path by emitting sounds.

"Some environments, like Hong Kong, are rather strange with a lot of people moving about and things scattered all over the pavement but one soon gets used to it," said Pivac.

"Having the spectacles means that I feel a bit more confident, and I don't have to concentrate so hard on trying to listen to what is going on around me."

Quebec paper publishes again

TROIS RIVIERE, Que. (CP) — The daily Nouvelliste is publishing again after editorial and advertising employees ended a daylong walkout.

A meeting between staff and the Nouvelliste management resulted in agreement to go ahead with Saturday's edition, said Jacques Laberge, president of the local journalists' union.

Montreal churches fraction of capacity

MONTREAL (CP) — Sunday morning church-goers in downtown Montreal could fit easily into five churches these days, instead of the 20-odd now used, a McGill University study shows.

But while attendance is down, the churches' real estate and architectural value is growing, Raymond Boyce and David Brown, students in an urban planning program under the direction of Prof. J. D. Farley, have found.

"What emerges is that Montreal's downtown churches are no longer used for religious services to the extent that they could be," says Prof. Farley.

Of the 21 churches studied, at least 12 had an average attendance of not more than one-third their seating capacity. For example, St. James United Church, with a seating capacity of 2,400, has an average Sunday attendance of about 200, St. George's Anglican with 1,000 seats, averages 131.

Roaming the paper countryside

He gets calls for the locations of large cities, towns, cities which no longer exist and whose names have been so badly mispronounced through the years that they are no longer recognizable.

Question Marquette as to where an ancestor might have lived in 1887, or the best way to get around Berea, Ohio. He probably knows.

Marquette watches over one of the Midwest's largest map collections, housed in the Cincinnati Public Library.

Although it is largely an unknown commodity to the public, there still are many people who have enough questions to keep Marquette rummaging through a collection of over 100,000 maps, 800 atlases and 250 gazetteers.

"One time, we had a fellow call who wanted to know the shape of a certain lake in New Guinea," said Marquette, who searched more than two hours before he found the right lake.

He spends most of his time roaming the paper countryside of Germany and old Austro-Hungarian Empire, trying to find old homesteads for many Cincinnati residents with German ancestry.

Other questions come from genealogists tracing ancestral homes, and for them Marquette offers city maps dating back to 1798. Marquette, who has been map librarian since 1972, also serves as a travel consultant. The library buys city street maps for all cities with a population over 25,000 and almost any community of over 5,000. The maps are available on loan.

"There's almost nowhere in the city that you can buy a map," Marquette says. "Every once in a while you find a map of Chicago, but by the time you want one, the store is sold out."

Tide wins McKechnie Cup

Cowichan representatives played a major role Sunday in bringing the McKechnie Cup, symbolic of inter-union rugby play in B.C., back to Vancouver Island.

Stand-off half Pat Simmons of Cowichan accounted for eight points with pinpoint kicking and clubmate Wes Thomas capped the scoring with a try to give Crimson Tide a 16-10 win over University of B.C. Thunderbirds before about 600 fans at Macdonald Park.

Simmons, who replaced the injured Gillie Greig, converted a try by Nick Eckhart of James Bay and gave the Tide a 9-6 lead at the half with a well-taken drop goal. Simmons added a penalty goal in the second half to lift the Tide into a 12-10 lead, setting the stage for Thomas' dazzling run in the final few minutes.

Scrum-half Preston Wylie had opened the scoring in the hard-tackling affair by scoring a try and adding the conversion midway through the first half. Centre Rob Greig completed the UBC scoring with a try shortly after the interval.

The victory left Crimson Tide with a 3-0 record in the four-team, round-robin competition. The Vancouver Island Rugby Union squad edged Vancouver Reps 3-0 early in the season and thumped the Fraser Valley Reps 29-7 here earlier this month.

UBC (1-2) was the defending champion and had shared the McKechnie Cup with Crimson Tide in 1974.

Cedar Hill wins

Earning the Dickinson and Dunn Trophy as over-all aggregate winner with 398 points, Cedar Hill also collected the Archie McKinnon Trophy for topping the novice division with 156 points, won the Pendray Trophy for winning the 200-metre girls freestyle relay and the Royal Canadian Legion award for a win in the boys' relay.

Arbutus placed second in the event, which drew about 600 swimmers, counting 226 points. Following were Lansdowne (213), Royal Oak-Claremont (196), Oak Bay (181), Dunsmuir (180), Central (117), Highrock (91), Shoreline (76), Reynolds (64), S. J. Willis (56), Norfolk House (24), unattached ((17) and Glenlyon (9). Lansdowne finished second in the novice category with 119 points, followed by Central and Shoreline (58 each), Reynolds (52) and Oak Bay (50).

Toros replace Baun

Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association announced Monday that coach Bobby Baun has been "relieved" of his duties and replaced by general manager Gilles Leger.

The Toros said in a news release that Leger will assume the added responsibilities of coaching the club for the remainder of the season.

"Bob gave it one hell of a shot but his efforts just didn't produce the needed result," Leger said. "One look at our record . . . shows that a move had to be made."

Leger is no stranger to coaching. He had eight winning seasons as a college coach, four at St. Francis Xavier in Antigonish, N.S., before joining the Toros then Ottawa Nationals as an assistant coach and chief scout for the 1972-73 season.

Baun has been offered another position with the Toros' organization but so far has declined to accept it.

Earlier this season, Baun was directed by Leger to take some time off from his coaching duties.

That was last December when the Toros had nine wins, three ties and 19 defeats, good for last place in their division.

Leger took over and directed the Toros to a 4-2 win over Edmonton in his first start before the club lost 10-1 to Calgary Cowboys two nights later. Baun, 39, returned with the stipulation that his bosses agree to a few changes regarding his duties.

The latest move came less than 24 hours after the Toros bowed, 7-6, to Winnipeg Jets leaving them with a record of 15 wins, five ties and 35 defeats.

In the midst of all you're hearing about Retirement Savings Plans the Permanent asks you to remember just one thing.

Our Guaranteed Fund is one of the best.

9½% interest per year* is the current rate on our Guaranteed Fund, with no annual administration fee.

That's important.

But even more important, the Permanent Guaranteed Fund has out-performed those of many major companies over the last 10 years.

We don't think we have to convince you that a Registered Retirement Savings Plan is a good thing. The immediate tax savings and the nest egg for the future makes that fact obvious.

It is also obvious that a lot of different financial institutions are selling them and that most are basically the same. Except when it comes to performance.

We also offer an Equity Fund and a Fixed income Fund with nominal annual administration fees.

So if you are going to open a RRSP this year or considering a change please come into the branch nearest you for more information.

CLOSE ATTENTION is given progress of rock delivered by skip Darryl Will of Kamloops as second Bruce Lemke and lead Mas Tahara apply brooms and vice-skip Don Whyte comes out to meet the rock. Action came in the opening game of the B.C. championship at Victoria Curling Club where the B.C. Curling Association champs bowed 7-5 to Bernie Sparkes and his Pacific Coast champions from Burnaby Winter Club. The best-of-three final resumes at 12 noon today with a third game, if necessary, at 7 p.m.

Sparkes wins opener

By JIM TANG

Bernie Sparkes, who helped win the Brier Tankard twice as second for Alberta-champion Ron Northcott, is now only one victory away from his eighth appearance in the Canadian men's curling championship.

The 35-year-old ex-Calgarian and his Burnaby Winter Club combination of Bert Gretzinger, Al Cook and Kevin Bauer came through Monday night at the Victoria Curling Club to continue their unbeaten playoff run by besting Darryl Will of Kamloops, 7-5, in the first game of the best-of-three provincial final.

It was the 12th consecutive playoff win for Sparkes, who has been on the Pacific Coast Curling Association's championship rink five times in the last six years.

Will, a 25-year-old construction worker who won the B.C. Curling Association championship, never managed to gain control of the game, even momentarily. He fell three rocks in arrears on the fourth end but Sparkes couldn't put him away and needed a last-rock draw to avoid an extra end.

Sparkes, who struggled from behind two or three times in the PCCA playoff, blanked the third end and the strategy paid off when he was able to assume a 4-1 lead on the next end.

The three-count came as the result of a controversial call by Will, who had second and fourth rocks in the side 12-foot ring behind the tee-line after Sparkes had drawn between them while failing to get second rock. The counting rock was in the front eight-foot ring behind cover and instead of trying to use the cover and draw for shot rock, Will elected to try and spill Sparkes' other rock. He didn't, and Sparkes got his three by staying on a wide-open takeout.

Will got two back on the fifth end when Sparkes' last rock drifted on the testing sheet-four ice and slid by the object rock to chip out his own rock and leave Will a free draw for a second point.

Sparkes blanked the sixth but was forced to take one on the seventh. Then Will blanked the eighth but had to take one on the ninth. That closed the gap to a single rock, but Sparkes stayed on the 10th end trying for another blank and took a 6-4 lead into the 11th end.

Will stayed alive with a successful draw against three to start home 5-6, and he pulled past a corner guard on the home end to get a counter with a piece of the eight-foot ring. Sparkes then drew to the back eight-foot.

The second game has been rescheduled for noon today, and if Will wins, the decider will be at 7 tonight.

On Sunday, Sparkes had to come from 2-6 to beat out Gary Sigurdson in the "B" final of the PCCA playdown and avoid a second game against the Cloverdale rink.

Sparkes started his comeback with a delicate chip shot on the eighth end which brought him two counters, then, as he did in two other PCCA games, he took advantage of errors to pull it out.

Sigurdson, who had been curling extremely well, appeared to change his game plan on the ninth end, and Sparkes stole a point when Sigurdson got only one counter trying for a double. Then Sparkes went ahead on the 10th end, stealing two when Sigurdson got himself trapped into a draw game. There were five rocks in the four-foot ring and Sparkes was counting his three when Sigurdson came up for last rock. He was a trifle narrow throwing weight in the hope of moving all three counters and failed to move two far enough.

Sigurdson drew against three for the tying point and was counting two with one rock left on the home end. But it belonged to Sparkes, and he ended things with a flourish by staying with a steaming takeout.

This is the second time Sparkes has skipped a rink to the PCCA title. He made it on the teehead in 1972 with the Giles brothers making up his crew, and was vice-skip for Lyall Dagg in 1971, Jack Tucker in 1973 and Jim Armstrong in 1974.

Team USA enlists pro talent

ATLANTA (AP) — Curt Bennett, the leading goal-scorer with Atlanta Flames of the National Hockey League, says he has agreed to play for the United States team in next fall's international tournament.

Bennett was one of a number of players contacted by Murray Williamson, a director of the American Professional Hockey Players Association.

Williamson, in New York, said 85 per cent of the American-born players in the NHL and World Hockey Association have agreed to play in the tournament. The squad will be called Team USA.

Other countries which will take part in the September tournament are Canada, the Soviet Union, Finalnd, Czechoslovakia and Sweden, Williamson said.

Williamson disclosed a tentative roster of the U.S. squad. NHL players on the proposed team include:

Goal — Pete LoPresti, Minnesota North Stars.

Defence — Gary Sargent, Los Angeles Kings; Jim McElmury, Kansas City Scouts; Bob Paradise of Washington Capitals; Mike Christie of California Golden Seals.

Report of six WHA cities joining NHL 'ludicrous'

A report that as many as six cities in the World Hockey Association may join the National Hockey League has been called "utterly ludicrous" by Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL.

"It hasn't got a vestige of truth in it," he said Monday.

It was reported earlier in Toronto that the financially-troubled Pittsburgh Penguins and California Seals may be shifted to Cleveland and Edmonton, cities said to be in danger of losing their WHA teams.

The report also said if the WHA fails to operate next season the NHL is prepared to look at the WHA teams in Cincinnati, Houston, Indianapolis, Quebec and Winnipeg. The Toronto Globe and Mail said as many as four of those cities would get expansion teams.

With proposed expansion to Miami and Denver, that would give the NHL 24 teams Campbell projected two years ago, the newspaper said it was told by NHL sources.

"It's never been considered by any responsible person in the NHL," Campbell said. "If they (WHA) go out of business, they die.

Next games: Tonight — Philadelphia at Vancouver, New York Rangers at New York Islanders, Kansas City at Pittsburgh, Minnesota at Los Angeles.

"We have no ambitions, no desires to move into territories just because the WHA has moved out. We'll just run our own shop.

Meanwhile, in rare Monday night action in the NHL, Toronto Maple Leafs romped to a 5-1 win over host Washington Capitals and St. Louis Blues scored a 4-2 win over the visiting California Seals.

Defenceman Borje Salming paced the Toronto win with a pair of goals, his 12th and 13th of the season. Darryl Sittler, with his 28th of the season, Claire Alexander, with his first, and Scott Garland were the other Toronto scorers while Bob Sirois was the only Capital to beat Gord McRae, who kicked out 31 shots.

Red Berenson and Claude Larose scored two goals each to account for all of the St. Louis scoring punch as all six goals were scored into the same net. The Blues scored twice in the first period, Seals fired a pair in the second, and then Berenson broke the tie and Larose added an insurance counter in the third period.

Rookie Dennis Maruk received credit for a goal which deflected off the skates of Blues' Bob McMillan to bring his total to 21, two less than Bryan Trottier of New York Islanders, who retained his lead over a talented crowd of rookies with a pair of goals Sunday in a 3-1 win over Buffalo Sabres.

Other Sunday highlights:

● Bobby Clarke picked up one assist to move to within one point of Guy Lafleur in the indiyidual scoring race as Philadelphia nipped Montreal, 2-1, with Lafleur held pointless.

● Boston Bruins remained within a point of the Flyers in the over-all points race as Jean Ratelle scored three goals in a 4-1 win over Chicago.

● Phil Esposito scored two goals and assisted on a third as New York Rangers trimmed Kansas City, 5-1.

Bates on hand tonight

Victoria Cougars added some insurance Monday on the eve of their most gruelling stretch of the Western Canada Hockey League season.

Starting with tonight's game at Memorial Arena, Cougars will play 11 games in 12 nights — 10 of them on a road trip through Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Kristoff, an 18-year-old native of Flin Flon, will see action tonight when Flin Flon Bombers play their second game here in four days.

In only his third WCHL game, Kristoff managed a goal and assist in a 6-1 decision Saturday against the Bombers. And he scored a goal Sunday in Nanaimo as the Clippers topped Penticton Vees, 9-2. The six-foot, 175-pounder played last season for the Clippers.

As a special attraction tonight, Cougars will honor Victoria Bate Construction men's fastball team at a ceremony between the first and second periods. Co-holders of the world title with the United States and New Zealand, Bates will be introduced at centre ice. Most members of the team arrived home on the weekend after a brief holiday following the world championships in Lower Hutt, N.Z.

In league play Monday, Roy Sommer scored three goals to lead Calgary Centennials to a 4-2 win over the Clubs in Winnipeg.

On Sunday, New Westminster Bruins pasted the visiting Bombers, 14-1; Saskatoon Blades tripped Brandon Wheat Kings, 7-3, in the Saskatchewan city; and Regina Pats battled to a 3-3 tie with the visiting Lethbridge Broncos.

Braves, Demons set for series

Belmont Braves and Dunsmuir Demons will likely settle on first and second placings in Division "A" of the Greater Victoria high school boys' basketball league season during the next 72 hours.

Scheduled to play a home-and-home series, starting tonight at Belmont and concluding Thursday at Dunsmuir, the teams are deadlocked with 9-1 records although the Braves have a better points for-and-against mark.

With Darrell Johnson hitting for 26 points, the Braves pulled into the first-place tie Monday by edging the Roadrunners, 62-56, at Reynolds. Braves held a 35-25 lead at the half but the Roadrunners rallied to get within a point starting the final quarter before Belmont took control. Jim Dunn led Reynolds marksmen with 17 points.

In girls' league action Monday, Reynolds clinched first place in "B" Division by posting a 46-32 decision over Belmont and Mount Douglas Ramblers kept pace with a 65-28 decision at Parkland.

Rhonda Keller and Tracy McAra scored 17 points each for Reynolds, which has an 11-1 record with one game to play. Sheila Chalmers led Belmont with 15 points.

Peggy McManaman scored 15 points and Leslie Cross added 12 as Mount Douglas finished its 13-game schedule with a 10-3 mark. Eleanor Benn led the still-winless Parkland squad with 12 points.

B.C. seniors play set at Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Nine district winners start a round-robin playoff at the Nanaimo Curling Club Wednesday which will decide the B.C. representative in the Canadian senior women's curling championship.

New provincial and Canadian champions will be crowned this year, Flora Martin of Victoria having failed to get through the district playdown. The Vancouver Island winner this year is an Oak Bay rink which has Hilda Dobereiner as skip and includes Blanche McCallum, Zella Dunkin and Elva Sealey.

Other district winners are Florence Makepeace of New Westminster, Deon Blake of the Burnaby Winter Club, Gloria Coons of Peace River, Beverley Reber of Whitehorse, Kathy Kerr of Prince Rupert, Ada Calles of Kimberley, Joan Morris of the Okanagan district, and Betty DeRidder of the Hollyburn Curling Club.

U.S. runner tops marathon

TOKYO (Reuter) — Bill Rogers of the United States beat more than 5000 rivals to win the annual Ohme marathon Sunday. The 20-year-old Rogers, regarded as one of the main contenders for the marathon at the Montreal Olympics, finished the 18.6-mile Ohme to Tokyo course in one hour, 33 minutes, 6.2 seconds. A total of 5,680 competitors, including 13 woman, took part in the race.

INNSBRUCK (CP) — An Austrian ski jumper, an Italian slalom specialist, a Norwegian cross-country skier and a speed-skater from the Netherlands provided balm for bruised national egos on the closing weekend of the 12th Winter Olympics.

The Austrians, without a winner to cheer since Franz Klammer's victory in men's downhill skiing on the opening day of the 10-day competition, were cheerful hosts again as Karl Schnabl and Toni Innauer finished 1-2 in the 90-metre jumping, the only closing-day event.

Schnabl's jumps of 320 and 310 feet earned him 234.8 points. Innauer, 17, slipped to 299 feet after the longest jump of the day, 337 feet, and collected 232.9 points. Henry Glass of East Germany took the bronze with 299-318 and 221.7 points.

Peter Wilson of Ottawa led the outclassed Canadian jumping team, placing 45th with jumps of 261 and 247 feet for 154.7 points.

Then came the closing ceremony in the Olympic Ice Stadium where Olympic champions John Curry of Britain and Dorothy Hamill of the United States gave a figure-skating exhibition.

Children scrambled gleefully around two sleds crammed with red tulips. Masked folk dancers pranced and stamped to a Tyrolean accordian in ancient tradition and another folk group weaved light patterns in the stadium, darkened as they formed the letters LP, for Lake Placid, the New York State resort where the 1980 Games will be held.

Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, proclaimed the Games closed, the twin Olympic flames were doused and the Olympic flag lowered to be raised again at Lake Placid.

The Soviet Union, with its powerful array of speed skaters, cross-country skiers and champion hockey team, nearly doubled its medal production of four years ago.

The Russians won 13 gold medals to seven for the East Germans, and in total medals led the final standing with 27. In the unofficial team points, Russia outscored East Germany 231 to 156.

Soviet competitors won six of 12 Nordic skiing titles, two of four in figure skating and four of nine in speed skating. And they kept the hockey gold medal for the fourth straight time. The East Germans won all five gold medals in bobsledding and luge categories.

The U.S. was third in the points table based on the 10-5-4-3-2-1 count for the first six placings in final events, earning 82 points, and fourth-placed West Germany had 77.

Western countries predominated only in Alpine skiing in which Kathy Kreiner's giant slalom victory prevented Rosi Mittermaier of West Germany from sweeping all three women's events and gave Canada a gold medal.

Piero Gros and Gustavo Thoeni salvaged a bleak Alpine skiing performance by Italy by taking the first two places in the men's slalom after their country had managed only a silver and a bronze in five previous events.

Norway, which has never failed to win a gold medal in Nordic skiing since the Games began, finally got one from Ivar Formo in the 50-kilometre cross-country and the Netherlands, which dominated speed skating at the 1972 Olympics with four titles, settled for Piet Kleine's victory over 10,000 metres.

Canada was 11th in the point standings with 26, compared with nine four years ago, and had a silver medal won by speed-skater Cathy Priestner of Calgary and a figure-skating bronze from Toller Cranston to go with Miss Kreiner's gold. At Sapporo, Japan, in 1972 the only Canadian medal was a figure-skating silver won by Karen Magnussen of Vancouver.

Tatiana Averina, a 25-year-old student from Gorky in central Russia, won more medals than anyone else with two golds and two bronzes in women's speed skating. American speed skater Sheila Young was a triple winner — gold, silver and bronze.

But Rosi Mittermaier was the biggest individual story. She won two skiing gold and missed becoming the first woman to score an Alpine triple when Miss Kreiner won the clock by 12-100ths of a second.

Rosi, daughter of a Bavarian hotel owner — she works for him as a waitress — was refreshingly open-minded about missing a triple, and credited Kathy with being a better skier.

Rosi's winning smile already has brought an offer of $120,000 from a toothpaste manufacturer to do television commercials pushing his product.

And million-dollar-plus offers await figure skaters to turn professional after the world championships in Goteborg, Sweden, next month. Defending champion Diane de Leeuw, American-born but skating for the Netherlands, and the new Olympic champion, Miss Hamill, are two of the girls the ice show promoters are seeking. Miss de Leeuw was the silver winner of the women's singles here.

Gold medalist arrives home

A rousing welcome awaited Kathy Kreiner, who won Canada's only Olympic Games gold medal, when she arrived Sunday at Toronto. Another 1000 people were on hand when she reached her hometown of Timmons, where Mayor Leo Del Villano has declared Thursday Kathy Kreiner Day during which the 18-year-old skier will be made honorary queen of Timmins' winter carnival.

Pearson limps to win

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — David Pearson and Richard Petty, battling for the lead, each smashed into a wall as they charged toward the finish line in the $350,000 Daytona 500 Sunday. Pearson won the stock car race by driving his crippled car through the infield and back onto the track.

It was an unbelievable finish to the richest stock car race ever held, and it brought Pearson his first Daytona 500 title and his 88th National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing Grand National career victory.

Pearson and Petty, rivals for a decade and the two men who have controlled this sport for years, ran bumper-to-bumper for the lead in the final 30 laps.

Petty led going into the final lap, but Pearson, using the draft created by these 180-mile-an-hour machines, slingshot his car into the lead on the backstretch. Then, coming around the fourth and final turn, Petty nudged his Dodge below Pearson to regain the lead heading into the final stretch run.

But as he tried to move completely in front of Pearson, Petty said the front end of his car "came loose." The car turned sideways, and Pearson's did the same thing.

Pearson smashed into the retaining wall on the outside of the course and spun into the infield. Petty spun down the straight stretch, straightening his car out several times. But he also finally hit the same outside wall and went into the infield, a bare 50 to 100 feet from the finish line.

Pearson managed to get his car going again, drove it onto the lower apron of the track and crossed the finish line while Petty's immobilized car merely spun its wheels. The Petty Dodge, with help from a crew, did finally get going to finish second.

Benny Parsons' bid for a second consecutive upset victory evaporated when the engine on his Chevrolet started to go sour while in the lead late in the race. He finished a distant third, followed by Lennie Pond and rookie Neil Bonnett.

The victory was worth $46,800 to Pearson — the biggest payday of his career. Petty earned $35,750, with Parsons taking $23,680.

Earl Ross of Ailsa Craig, Ont., placed 39th, completing 28 laps before the engine of his Chevelle let go. He earned $2,025. Roy Smith of Victoria finished 20th in a Chevrolet, completing 148 laps and winning $2,690.

Smith, driving a 1975 Chevelle owned by Victoria's Dick Midgley, started in 39th position but had moved to 15th by the 148th lap.

Double trouble struck. Smith dropped out when his car developed engine trouble as well as a clutch problem. Smith wasn't able to return.

At the other end of the standings, London Boxing Club was held to a 1-1 draw by Gorge-Molsons and had its first-place margin cut to a single point.

Snead just hangs on to post repeat win

SAN DIEGO (AP) — J. C. Snead, who watched a once-commanding five-shot lead all but disappear, birdied the final hole Sunday and held off Don Bies to win the Andy Williams-San Diego Open golf tournament.

Snead, now the winner of this title for the second consecutive year, bent almost double then heaved a huge sigh of relief after he coaxed in a four-foot putt that clinched it on the 18th hole of the 7047-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Country Club.

Snead, could do no better than match par-72 for the final round and finished with a 272 total, 16 under par.

The veteran Bies, who scored his first tour triumph last fall, started the day six shots back of Snead and made up all but one stroke with a five-under-par 67 and a 273 total.

Australian veteran Bruce Crampton lipped out an eagle putt on the final hole, shot a 68 and was tied at 275 with 46-year-old Don January and Mike Morley. January had a 70, Morley 69 in the bright, sunny weather.

Bies closed to within a single shot with a long birdie putt, perhaps 40 feet, on the 14th hole.

He had a chance to catch Snead on the next hole, but missed from about eight feet. Snead also parred. And they stayed one stroke apart down the stretch, reeling off par after par in growing pressure.

The 18th, a 501-yard par five guarded by a little pond, was — as usual in this tournament — the decisive hole.

Bies drove into the right rough but — with the players allowed to lift, clean and place the ball — was able to provide himself with a good lie and went for the green with a wood. He put it on the back fringe. Snead was just to the left of the green in two.

Bies was away and putting for an eagle. He backed off once, then missed. Snead chipped down to about four feet.

He rolled it in — and had to have it to win. Bies made his and they finished one shot apart.

ARCADIA, Calif. (CP) — Diabolo, owned by Frank McMahon of Vancouver and winner of the 1975 California Derby, broke down in Monday's seventh race at Santa Anita Park and was taken from the track in an ambulance. A preliminary examination by a veterinarian showed a shattered right hind pastern and it wasn't immediately known if doctors could save the four-year-old colt.

USE THE GOVERNMENT'S OWN RULES TO SAVE A BUNDLE ON INCOME TAX.

TAX SAVINGS OPPORTUNITY #1.

Many people are eligible for this tax savings opportunity so there should be smiles-a-plenty. Husbands where the family home is in their wife's name. Income earning wives where the family home is in their husband's name. And all apartment dwellers and others who don't own a home.

This tax savings opportunity is called a Canada Trust Home Ownership Savings Plan and the money you deposit in this Plan is tax free if you eventually use it to buy a home or home furnishings (a cottage may also qualify). An individual making around $10,000 could realize yearly tax savings of $300. As well, the money deposited to the Plan earns good interest.

You can find out about the Canada Trust Home Ownership Savings Plan through a handy booklet available at our branches. But hurry, you'll have to act now to save on '75 income tax.

TAX SAVINGS OPPORTUNITY #2.

If you're a wage earner you can start smiling because a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan can probably save you a bundle on income tax while you sock away money for the future.

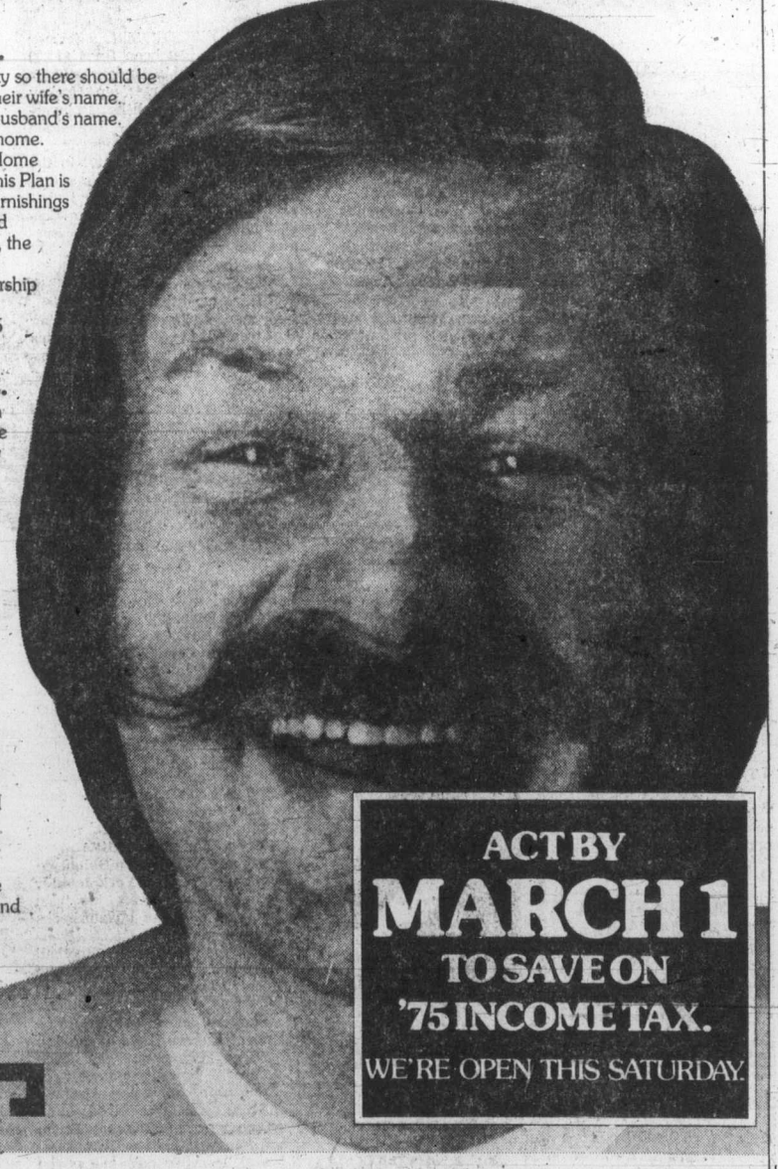

Say, for example you're married with two dependent children and make around $15,000: you could save as much as $1,000 on '75 income tax. And if both husband and wife are income earners, both can set up a Plan.

Short of cash? We can probably help you start a Plan and get your deduction against '75 income tax with a Canada Trust "Retirement Savings Loan" In most cases it can be arranged right on the spot and with no red tape.

Even if you're already in a pension plan at work, it makes sense to take advantage of this tax saving since a company pension may not be enough to guarantee you a comfortable retirement on its own.

With a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan there's no sales commission to pay and your money isn't locked in forever. In fact, should you decide to forget the whole thing, you can get your money out. (But if you do, you'll have to pay the appropriate income tax.)

We also have a handy booklet explaining all about the Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan. Call or drop in and get the details. But, as with tax savings opportunity #1, you'll have to act now to save on '75 income tax.

ACT BY MARCH 1 TO SAVE ON '75 INCOME TAX.
WE'RE OPEN THIS SATURDAY.

Court reserves seabed decision

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. court of appeal reserved decision Monday on ownership of the seabed under the waters between Vancouver Island and the B.C. mainland.

The issue was placed before the court in an application by the provincial government. It asked the court to rule that the waters of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, the Strait of Georgia (Gulf of Georgia), Johnstone Strait and the Queen Charlotte Strait belong to B.C.

The application was opposed by the federal government but the position of the B.C. government was adopted by Newfoundland.

B.C. claims it owned the waters when it entered confederation in 1871. Its ownership claim is based on the Oregon Treaty of 1846.

At stake are rights to minerals said to lie under the seabed.

Morale lift in uniforms

OTTAWA (CP) — New uniforms, costing between $800,000 and $1 million, are being supplied to postal clerks across the country, Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey announced Monday.

Mackasey, who sported one of the new navy jackets and ties, said he felt they would "help our employees' morale."

Panarctic crash recalled

Co-pilot testifies

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A weeping David Hatton, his voice choked with emotion, gave a public inquiry its first eyewitness account Monday of the final moments of a high Arctic flight that ended in death for 32 of 34 men aboard.

Hatton, co-pilot of a Panarctic Oils Ltd. Electra flying from Edmonton to Rea Point, N.W.T., on Oct. 30, 1974, had to fight to keep control of himself on several occasions as he told the Stevenson inquiry his story.

The flight engineer, Garry Weyman, who will give his account today, was the only other survivor.

Hatton described the Electra flight as "perfectly normal in every regard" from Edmonton until shortly before its final approach to Rea Point.

The Electra had descended from its cruising altitude of 2,500 feet to about 300 feet, he said. The crew was flying on instruments and there had been no visual contact with the ground.

"At 300 feet we levelled out momentarily and I recall looking out my window and seeing a dark area," Hatton said. "It appeared we were over open water."

Hatton said he relayed this information to the pilot, Captain Brian Thomson, who was killed in the crash. The pilot, said Hatton, had been manually controlling the plane's power levers during this stage of the flight.

Pausing to control himself, Hatton continued: "Then he pushed the wheel ahead. He did not cry out, he did not slump over the controls.

"He didn't push it in violently; it was a smooth movement."

He said he and Weyman shouted warnings to Thomson but he did not react to them. They then pulled back on the control wheel, but it was too late, and the plane crashed.

World recognition for weatherman

A former Victoria man has become the first Canadian to win an International Meteorological Organization prize for weather research and international co-operation.

Dr. Warren L. Godson, 57, of Toronto, was presented the prize last week after many years directing research groups working with meteorologists from other countries laying groundwork for world weather observation.

Godson is director-general of atmospheric research in the atmospheric environment service of Environment Canada.

The prize was established in 1951.

Godson was born in Victoria and his mother Edna Godson served for a time as headmistress of Queen Margaret's School at Duncan.

Relatives still in the city are an aunt, Lillian E. Godson, and a cousin, Phyllis Kimmerly.

He was educated at University of British Columbia and University of Toronto before joining the former Canadian Meteorological Service in 1942.

Owners sought for stolen items

Faced with the problem of what to do with several thousand dollars worth of stolen items, the Victoria police detective division Monday asked the public to help both police and themselves.

Detectives said they felt the most efficient way to tracing the owners of the items, seized in two recent raids on a Sidney home, was to list them for the public and then urge possible owners to phone detectives at 384-4111 for possible identification.

So that's what anyone should do if any of the following has been stolen in about the last six months:

One eight-inch black-and-white TV set, one record turntable with plastic top, two sets of stereo headphones, two cameras, 53 long-play recordings, about 70 45-rpm recordings and numerous pieces of jewelry.

The jewelry includes men's and women's rings, one of which is an engagement ring with three diamonds; several gold chain necklaces, some with pendants or stones attached; a number of silver and gold bracelets, most with charms, and earrings and lockets.

Police said one person was arrested during the investigation but was not facing a charge in connection with the items.

Heavy going

Golf shop break-in

Thieves who broke into the Uplands golf course pro shop Saturday evening will have no trouble carrying their clubs or walking a course, but can play only part of each hole.

Oak Bay police said Monday the thieves took about $800 worth of golfing items including six pairs of shoes, a golf bag and about 10 clubs—all of them woods.

'As things stand now' . . .

Bennett goes on TV Friday but no comment till Monday

The long-awaited state-of-the-province speech by Premier Bennett will be televised Friday, "as things stand now," the premier's public relations consultant, David Brown, said Monday.

Originally the speech was to have been given last night. That date was later changed to "tentatively Thursday" of this week.

Monday the date was confirmed "as things stand" for Friday at 6:30 on CTV and 7 on CBC television.

The premier will not be available for comment, "as things stand" until the following Monday morning, said Brown.

As for the TV appearance, arrangements have been made for the speech to be taped sometime Friday afternoon under the direction of a special producer. The tape will then be made available to CTV and CBC.

Asked why the premier wouldn't be available for questions on the content of his speech until three days after it was delivered, Brown said he didn't know.

Progressive Conservative Leader Scott Wallace was blunter.

"It's a typical Madison Avenue approach," he said. "This is the type of politician who makes statements during an election campaign, then tells the people what he really meant after he's in office.

"It's disturbing, to say the least. He's been keeping the province on tenterhooks for weeks regarding this great message, and now he's not prepared to tell us what he means, by whatever he's going to say, until three days after he's said it."

Quake survivors phone home

Vancouver Island families with relatives travelling in Guatemala at the time of the Feb. 4 earthquake are slowly learning their whereabouts.

But at least two Victoria area families have not received word from their children, believed to be in Central America.

Niki Wallace and Tony Meek, both 21 and of Victoria, were last heard from in Mexico Jan. 23. Mrs. Cicely Meek, of 3380 Kingsley said she'd received an unconfirmed report that the two were safe in Guatemala City.

Over the weekend, Mrs. L. H. Hardy of Nanaimo heard from her son, Gordon, 23, who had reached Mexico without incident from quake-torn Guatemala.

No match for Mahler

By JON FERRY
Colonist Staff

It would be hard to say that the Victoria Symphony and Mahler were mis-matched Monday night.

And it wasn't as if the orchestra didn't play Mahler's Fourth Symphony well, even impressively, especially in the elegiac third movement.

It was just that it didn't play the work brilliantly.

And Mahler, for all his lushness and sweetness, still rings sufficiently strange on modern ears to require a high-octane performance to spark convincingly.

By the time Mahler wrote this piece (first performed in Munich in 1901) the symphony as a musical form had come a long way, turning in his hands into a sprawling free-form affair.

The fourth symphony, even though the shortest of his symphonies and certainly one of the happiest, is still long.

It's a carnival full of delights that requires an orchestra with the flexibility of a string quartet, the spriteliness of a dance band and the thick power of a full-blown cathedral organ, to help it on its way.

The Victoria orchestra didn't quite match these specifications Monday night at the Royal under conductor Laszlo Gati.

Despite a cracking good start, the first two movements, at any rate, lacked a good deal in piquancy, flair and plain old humor necessary to grab an audience.

The orchestra was most impressive when given a simple stately theme as in the third movement which was played with a good degree of warmth and power.

The final movement saw guest soprano Anna Chornodolska, a Canadian product, sing with gentle, intelligent if relatively undramatic lyricism and round off an ambitious performance from the orchestra that probably was only a couple of practise sessions away from fruition.

After rattling off Beethoven's Fidelio overture, the orchestra spent the rest of the first part of the concert accompanying the soloist in Richard Strauss' Four Last Songs.

Completed in 1948, the year before Strauss died, the songs are rather lugubrious affairs, like overblown purple roses swaying heavily if expansively in the breeze.

Miss Chornodolska's interpretation of them was pleasant if uncommanding and unimpressive in high register. The orchestra, despite a sloppy ending to the third song, was, in the main, a receptive accompanist.

Esquimalt council moves to press tardy taxpayers

Eleven Esquimalt property owners who owe the municipality more than $1,000 each in back taxes from last year will soon be hearing from council.

Council agreed Monday that the property owners would receive 21 days to pay before the municipality takes court action as provided in the Municipal Act.

In a report last week to the finance committee, treasurer Peter Cairns said about $130,000 was owing from both 1974 and 1975. Most of the delinquent taxpayers, he said, were owners of commercial properties.

One motel owner owes the municipality about $27,000.

Cairns had told the committee it was likely that many of the owners were withholding their taxes, paying the eight per cent annual penalty and making business use of the tax money which, if they were to borrow it, would cost them over 9.5 per cent.

Council renewed its pound contract with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals at a price of $18,277. This represents an approximate 10 per cent hike over 1975 but Mayor Art Young said that with licence fees and fines remitted to the municipality, the figure could drop to about $11,000.

"There's no way we could duplicate it (the service) for this kind of money," Ald. Jim McEvay said.

Council agreed to extend earthquake insurance coverage to the recreation centre, bringing the cost of coverage for this building and the sports centre to about $4,500 annually.

Council also approved a 25 per cent increase in building permit fees after a report by municipal engineer M. H. Campbell showed 1975 operating costs of the building department exceeded revenues by more than 23 per cent.

In other business council agreed to send a letter to the federal transport ministry insisting that any abandonment of passenger service between Victoria and Courtenay by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway should include the railway company remitting any past grants and lands it received for operating the service.

Healing Substance...
Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Show raises $1,001 for Guatemala aid

A total of $1,001 was raised Sunday in a 10-hour Guatemalan relief benefit held at the Bachanalia Cabaret.

'Mutt and Jeff' in daylight robbery

Two masked men made off with more than $300 from a James Bay pharmacy Monday but not without a short chase from a clerk they had threatened with a concealed weapon.

The two, described by police as a "Mutt and Jeff" team and believed to be about 20, entered the James Bay United Pharmacy, 230 Menzies, just before closing time at 5:45 p.m.

According to owner Gerry Lundgren, clerk Ruth Ridley was surprised at the counter by the two men who were wearing caps and silk stockings over their faces.

She was then threatened by what police described as a simulated weapon in the sleeve of one of the men.

As Ms. Hicks was emptying the till of the day's receipts, assistant pharmacist Colleen Hicks entered the store from a back room and immediately started to phone police when she saw the robbery in progress.

The two then fled on foot with the cash and Ms. Hicks pursued but soon lost them. She noticed that one of the two lost his cap and stopped to retrieve it.

Lundgren, who was in a back room at the time of the robbery, said the two probably had waited outside until all the customers had left the store.

He said it was the first daylight robbery in his six years of operating the store.

NO SUN BUT FUN

Victoria youngsters had all the symptoms of spring fever Monday, despite brisk winds, grey skies and, officially, at least five more weeks of winter. At Rochdale Place, stilts are suddenly the rage; high-rise walkers are Jay Hooper, Garth Henault and Cory Hooper. At Dallas Road seafront, meanwhile, 2½-year-old Dyllan McLean expended so much energy riding his toy duck that father Vince, of 156 Joseph, had to carry both of them home.

Saanich orders teeth for 'Jaws'

Jaws of Life will be coming to Saanich.

It's not a film sequel. These jaws are actually car-clipping equipment which Saanich firemen have been borrowing from Victoria firemen to free accident victims from auto wreckage.

The equipment has been used in Saanich five times since the city purchased it in mid-1975, fire chief H. B. Gains reported to council Monday.

"While the loan of this equipment and manpower from Victoria is much appreciated, there is a certain time delay which could well cost a life," he said, and he suggested Saanich purchase its own equipment.

Ald. Fred Severson, himself a city fireman, said the Victoria fire department has offered to train Saanich firemen to operate the equipment. He added that Saanich should purchase its own tips for the metal-cutters immediately, to save wear and tear on the city's equipment.

Council approved the purchase, with Saanich's unit of the Provincial Emergency Program taking up half of the $8,000 purchase price.

No if or butt, smokes out for aldermen

The latest victim is the Saanich council chamber—or more specifically, Mayor Ed Lum and aldermen William Noel, Fred Severson, and Joe Bourque.

A resolution to ban smoking in the council chamber was narrowly passed at Monday's council meeting.

An attempt to ban smoking was turned back last year, but the election of non-smokers David Paterson and Maurice Johnson gave the crusade just the boost it needed.

The two newcomers added their votes to those of Mary Casilio, Roy Wootten and John McDonald.

Immediately after Wootten introduced the resolution, Noel began to complain that, if smoking was banned in the chamber, the ban should logically be extended to the entire building (a frightful prospect for Noel, who already has to cope with a ban at home).

As Noel talked, Ald. Fred Severson lit up a large cigar and gleefully puffed away until his head was all but lost in billows of smoke.

Then Bourque joined in, claiming he had never heard any complaints about smoking in the chamber and to create regulations where no problem existed would be clearly discriminatory.

Meanwhile, McDonald, who sits between Bourque and Severson, was leaning back in his chair to escape the fumes of Severson's cigar.

He claimed he had as much right to not inhale second-hand smoke from Severson's cigar as Severson had to smoke.

Lum, who had been looking a bit nervous, relaxed when he lit up his own cigarette.

A tabling motion by the smokers was defeated.

Severson made a final plea, asking that visitors in the chamber's gallery be permitted to enjoy their smokes.

Then the resolution passed, five to four.

Severson wanted a few more puffs on his miniature chimney, but municipal clerk (and fellow cigar-puffer) Gordon Hayward confirmed that the resolution did not require second, third, and final readings to take effect.

Heritage Day just won't go away.

Which may seem rather odd, since it was never really here.

But, with the B.C. Government Employees' Union, it's the thought that counts. And the union wants to hang a $4-million bill on the province for a special day that was — at best — stillborn.

The catch is Article 1701 in the BCGEU's collective agreement with the government, which says: "Heritage Day shall be recognized as a designated paid holiday upon proclamation."

And it was proclaimed. When the federal government didn't do it, as expected, the new provincial cabinet did on Jan. 20. But then, in a change of mind, it rescinded the order, and Monday—which was to have been Heritage Day in B.C.—was a day just like any other day.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy says Heritage Day was never proclaimed as a statutory holiday, but simply as a day of honor.

But the union is pointing to the clause and saying that once proclaimed, it falls into the holiday category and should mean double-time payment for all government employees working Monday.

The union has filed a policy grievance with the public service commission, something that is expected to put legal minds to the test. If the matter isn't solved at this level, the next step is expected to be binding arbitration.

The case is proving interesting to the labor movement as a whole, even though other unions don't stand to gain anything.

"The BCGEU is very fortunate in the special wording of its contract," a spokesman for the B.C. Federation of Labor said Monday. "It is probably the only union with the actual words Heritage Day in its contract, and it would seem to have a legitimate claim."

Fryer
. . . monumental goof

It's the kind of claim the BCGEU says could cost the government $4 million in double time payment.

The irony of the case, according to union officers, is that the actual cost would have been only a small fraction of this amount if the government had allowed the day to stand as a proclaimed holiday.

The vast majority of the union's 35,000 members would have had the day off with no extra pay.

"After realizing at the last minute that the proclamation entitled BCGEU members to the holiday, the government is trying to wriggle out of this obligation by playing sleight-of-hand tricks with orders-in-council," Fryer said.

He said later there had been an insinuation that he was acting in an irresponsible manner.

"It seems to me it is a legitimate labor relations problem of the government's making — not of the union's," he said. "The proper way to deal with such a matter is through grievance, which is what we are doing."

Fryer says it is interesting to note that the government is the only employer with the power "to give a holiday, then take it away."

Whatever the end result, those who miss Heritage Day can take heart that this is now Heritage Week in B.C. In rescinding its original order, cabinet designated the week as such — only not as a holiday.

Henderson parking cut

A Henderson Road partial parking ban suggested last week as an interim solution to the problem of whether the street should have a bikeway was approved by Oak Bay council Monday.

The street from Lansdowne to Cedar Hill Cross Road will be closed to parking for northbound cars from 8 to 10 a.m. and for southbound vehicles from 3 to 5 p.m.

Some Henderson Road residents are angry over their street being slated as part of th Capital Region bikeway, and though Victoria and Saanich have approved their sections of the path, Oak Bays is still in limbo.

Saanich wants tougher rules for juveniles

Juvenile lawbreakers and their parents should be hit with stiffer penalties, according to Saanich council.

An increase in crime among juveniles was the most disturbing part of Saanich's climbing crime rate, Mayor Ed Lum said Monday during council's discussion of the 1976 police budget.

Saanich was starting community programs to prevent juvenile crime, Lum said. Meanwhile, laws concerning juveniles made it "very frustrating" to deal with juveniles in the courts, he said.

Penalties should be stiffer and parents should be made responsible for their children's offences, he said. Ald. William Noel agreed, adding that parents should be made to pay for property damage.

B.C. police chiefs have already urged the attorney-general to strengthen laws dealing with juveniles, and council could do the same, Lum said. Council passed a motion to that effect.

Lum also criticized provincial court procedures which added unnecessarily to police overtime. As many as six officers at a time could be tied up in court, he said. He complained of many cases in which officers had waited hours, only to hear a case remanded.

Because provincial court needed "tightening up," the hiring of additional police officers would not cut overtime costs in Saanich's police budget, he said.

The switch to a 12-hour shift for police had helped the overtime situation a little, Lum said. He added that much more work seemed to be getting done since the 12-hour shifts started.

"Much to my astonishment," he said. He hadn't expected the new schedule to work well.

Council tabled the police budget so it could be discussed with the police board later this month. It calls for an increase of $618,500 or just over 25 per cent more than the 1975 budget.

Oak Bay keeps liquor lounge

"You can't run a facility that pleases all the people all the time," Mayor Brian Smith said.

"And where have the objectors been?" he asked, saying the bar in the centre near Fort and Foul Bay had been open for four months.

Council received two letters from Victoria and Oak Bay United churches expressing disapproval of the sports complex bar, and one petition with 34 names of residents also opposed.

Cadboro Bay United Church minister Rev. Robert McLaren feared the bar tended to break up families at the centre because children were denied entry to the upper-level lounge.

"I want you to have a facility here that doesn't divide fathers and mothers and sons and daughters," he said.

One young father said he wasn't allowed to take his 20-month-old son into the lounge recently.

"Why should I go there and have to be separated from my family?" he asked.

A suggestion from Ald: John Goult that the provincial government be petitioned to amend liquor laws to allow children into the lounge with their parents was rejected.

Both Esquimalt and Juan de Fuca recreation centres near Victoria served liquor seven days a week, Smith said.

Representatives of women's and men's curling groups made submissions supporting retention of the bar.

One resident responded to McLaren's comments about family breakdown through divisive activities such as drinking.

"It's not the church's fault family structures are falling down. That's a bigger problem than this council is expected to fix," Anne Buie, 1082 Richmond, said.

Liquor is served at the centre from 6 to 10 p.m. Mondays to Fridays.

Compromise on cost-sharing may preserve library system

By LORRAINE ATHERTON
Colonist Reporter

Saanich made what Mayor Ed Lum called "a major compromise" Monday to save the Greater Victoria library system.

Council agreed to go along with the library board's latest cost-sharing formula to end the Saanich-Victoria tug-of-war over library regionalization.

The library board has been trying to win an increased provincial grant from the Library Development Commission, but Victoria endangered the grant by refusing to accept a new cost-sharing formula suggested by the commission. That formula was based on school assessment.

The latest formula sets a base payment for each municipality. Then the provincial grant is added to the budget and the surplus is divided among the municipalities through a formula based on general assessment and population.

The increased grant could save Saanich alone $100,000. But under the plan vetoed by the city, Saanich could have saved $140,000 while the city paid only a few hundred dollars more, Lum said.

The city's fears about the long-term costs under the school assessment formula were not well-founded, he said, because in the long-term, under either formula, Saanich would pay the major share of the library budget.

But to prevent the break-up of the library board, the city had to be satisfied, Lum told his council.

The formula must still be approved by the other participating municipalities, and it must be accepted by the commission.

In other business, council voted to declare the southeast corner of McKenzie and Saanich roads a development area. Anolac Investments will attempt to negotiate a land-use contract for 10 units of attached housing on the site.

Autoplan agents braced for two-week rush

Body-shop jam unnecessary

It's not exactly a two-ring circus, but business is picking up on two fronts as the Feb. 29 deadline draws near for B.C. motorists.

Motorists trying to get under the wire ahead of higher repair rates have created a minor rush on Victoria's Insurance Corp. of B.C. claims centre, as well as body shops.

They are also beginning to form small lineups for 1976 Autoplan insurance policies and licences.

Monday, with 13 days to go, it was difficult to say what effect the controversial doubling and tripling of Autoplan premiums would have on the non-compulsory aspects of insurance coverage.

Business was reported as "brisk" and "normal" for this time of year by some insurance agents and a spokesman for the motor vehicle branch.

But with the big rush yet to come, plans have been made to keep motor vehicle branch and government agent offices open on the last two Saturdays of the month.

Branch offices in Victoria, the Lower Mainland, Kamloops and Trail will be open Feb. 21 and 28 from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. In smaller communities, government agents' offices will be open on the same days from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Private insurance offices handling the government-run Autoplan will be open on the same two Saturdays.

This year will also bring new licence plates for commercial vehicles and commercial trailers — a change after three years of decals. The decal system remains for all other vehicles and private trailers.

A spokesman for the Motor Vehicle Branch said the new issue of commercial plates was made necessary when "we ran out of number sequences."

Commercial vehicles and trailers will now carry plates with letters in addition to numbers.

The run on the claims office and body shops has been prompted by the extra money it is going to cost policy-holders for collision repairs after Feb. 29.

Under current terms, motorists have to pay a minimum of $50 toward collision repairs and $25 on a new windshield. The new policies will double these minimums.

An ICBC spokesman said many motorists mistakenly believe their cars have to be repaired before the end of February to qualify for the lower deductible rate. The repairs can be completed afterward as long as the accident occurred before the deadline, he said.

Hard Indian fact: Water is costly

BOMBAY (CP) — The Indian administration appears to be getting tough with peasants who expect more government aid without making any contributions themselves.

Recently, peasants in a dozen hamlets in the Krishna County of Andhra state discovered that the water pipes in their backyards had gone dry.

More than 50,000 peasants in the area now are without purified drinking water and have to depend on rain-fed wells.

Some politicians say the drastic action was taken when the panshayats (village councils) failed to make contributions toward maintenance charges.

A few of the councils say they have no money, while others say that the contribution demanded is "impossibly high."

Andhra state officials say there is no other way to bring the erring village councils to their senses.

One official said: "Do these people take welfare measures for granted? Nothing comes free and if the peasants want safe drinking water, more schools or roads, they must be prepared to pay at least a part of the expenditure to the government."

A ruling Congress Party politician defended the government's action by saying that "socialism does not mean the mere distribution of benefits without a corresponding growth of public responsibility."

The big and the small of B.C.

This man directs aural history

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

If you've got something to say about British Columbia, Bill Langlois wants to hear it.

Don't worry, he's a good listener. He has to be as director of aural history at the Provincial Archives.

Aural—not to be confused with oral—is that which is heard according to Langlois. And much of what is relevant to B.C. life today, Langlois said, is heard before it is read.

"Most decisions there are made orally and then backed up with a memo," he said.

And chances are if someone was around with a tape recorder at the time, then the words of those decisions are among the 8,000 hours of listening stored in the basement of the archives.

While Langlois and his staff of five could easily hunt up a tape of Dave Barrett's Winfield speech from his 1974 fall tour or the recollections of CCF'er Harold Winch or the Hansard tapes from the spring sitting, he said only about 10 per cent of their material is related to B.C. politics.

The bulk of the tapes deals with the social and economic life of the province from between the wars to today. The provincial collection started in 1973 has some tapes covering the late 19th century but Langlois finds that people with vivid recollections of this era are being silenced with time.

"As long as people are alive, well and interviewable" is all that's needed before Langlois dispatches a staffer with a tape recorder. But first he likes to know just what it is people have to tell, so he likes a short outline first.

"We can't interview everyone in the province," he said.

And it isn't just the first-hand accounts of the so-called greats of the province that Langlois wants. The recollections of a lumberman for the department's on-going primary industries collection is just as important as that of the forest owners.

In many cases for Langlois, they are more fascinating.

"It's interesting to see how the common man has struggled to make a living, given his kids an education, and the influences of government decisions such as wars or depressions have had on him."

It isn't just people that make it into the collection but environmental noises from the sounds of a lumber camp to a ferry through Active Pass.

Langlois won't pay for tapes. On an approximate $140,000-a-year-budget, he can't. But outfits like the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. or private radio stations have been good about allowing their documentaries, interviews and news clips to be transposed onto the special tape.

Sometimes Langlois can trade existing sound information for other tapes held by university or offer expertise on an aural project in return for a finished tape prepared by a corporation or historical society. It was under similar circumstances that his department collaborated with B.C. Forest Products in its publication of First Growth.

Langlois had his staff poised with tape recorders for last Friday's ICBC demonstration but when the crowd seemed less than expected, he decided to pick it up from radio stations.

Questioning the need for all this taped information brings a look of incredulity to the face of 27-year-old Langlois who started the department on an L.I.P. grant while a disenchanted graduate student at the University of British Columbia four years ago.

"You are preserving parts of the history of the province that are preserved in no other way," he insists.

But as to why this is necessary, he replied:

"We need to know what life was like in the past to understand our present situation."

'Wouldn't be caught dead in YW'

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — When Isabel Russell was an undergraduate student at University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon she "wouldn't be caught dead in the YWCA."

She soon retires as executive director of the Kitchener YWCA, ending a 37-year association with that organization.

"It was the last organization I ever dreamed of being a part of in my undergraduate years," she said in an interview. "I had an image of the YWCA as being so good and saintly that I would be a fish out of water."

Born in Rocanville, Sask., she describes the area as "a community where people had carried over the traditions of Ontario—the large square homes, the calling cards, community involvement."

She said: "Community involvement was part of our experience as children. Ours was a home where people came to discuss problems. The house was always filled with people. There was a great deal of intellectual activity."

"For those of us who experienced the Depression in Saskatchewan there was an urgency for social action," she said. "We had such a sense of need to change the world."

Youth discussion groups flourished, leading to "almost a whole self-help movement in spite of the adversity. It enhanced the utilization of resources and people."

After graduating in 1930 with a science degree, Miss Russell taught for six years in country schools under very primitive conditions."

Sao Paulo tries out $897-million venture

Rail-bus link keeps city moving

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — The city has linked its new subway system with surburban bus lines to help relieve city pollution problems and a giant traffic jam.

Metro, the first line traversing this city from north to south, was inaugurated last September. Already the steel cars are carrying 180,000 passengers daily over the track below the city streets.

There are 12 trains with six cars each. A train passes every seven minutes and stops at all 19 stations, a line spokesman said.

Aimed to help low-salary workers living in worker suburban areas on the city's periphery, the Companhia Metropolitana de Sao Paulo, which operates the Metro, initiated a plan where a subway ticket also can be used to board certain buses.

A subway ticket costs 1.5 cruzeiros (17 cents) with a book of 10 tickets costing 14 cruzeiros ($1.64). However, subway riders can ask for integracao tickets which have a magnetic stripe on both sides of the ticket for the same price.

When inserted into the turnstile the integracao ticket pops up and is retrieved by the passenger as he pushes through. The ticket can then be used on one private and 11 city bus lines. These tickets also can be used in the reverse manner— from bus to subway.

"This is one of the few places in the world where you can ride a bus and a subway for the same fare," said a subway spokesman.

The subway-bus combination has cut travel for many city workers to one hour from three in each direction, he said.

It still is too early to estimate what effect the Metro has had on other city traffic, the spokesman said.

Women outlive men by ever-wider margin

LONDON (Reuter) — Women now are living eight years longer than men compared to the beginning of the century, when the gap was only two or three years, American research in the General Practitioner Journal showed.

Also the gap will continue to grow for the next 40 years, the research showed. Scientists think it's because of genetic differences between the sexes.

They said that sex hormones might be involved. Researchers at Georgetown Hospital have found that in rats and guinea pigs, the blood of females is less likely to clot than in males.

The male hormone testosterone might cause blood clotting, they said. When the sex organs of male and female animals were removed, the tendency to clot was similar.

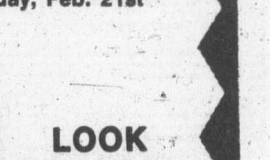

Research also showed that male blood pressure rises faster than female in response to stress. This would have been useful at an early stage in human evolution—to spur the man to fight or flee under stress— but it might be harmful now.

Recognition came for painter after retirement

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Lloyd Johnston of London, a 69-year-old painter, says he must decide on what to do with the rest of his life.

He had his first one-man show at the St. Thomas Art Gallery and still is adjusting to what he considers a sudden interest in his work. He has never had this sort of gallery exposure, has never been interviewed about his art and has never had so much attention paid to his paintings before.

He couldn't devote full time to painting until he retired in 1967 after 50 years as a Canadian Pacific Railway employee. His summer holidays from CPR were spent attending several national art schools including Banff School of Fine Arts, Doon School of Fine Arts and Queen's University school. He has been president and vice-president of London's Gallery Painting Group.

His most influential teacher was Molly Bobak at the Banff school, who was first to notice his skill with color.

"She used to give me a piece of paper with a subject on it, for example hockey, or a park at night," Mr. Johnston said. "Then she would leave me to come up with something on my own."

Mr. Johnston is, more by instinct than by design, an impressionist painter. His work falls between the real and abstract, and relies heavily on imagination and perception of mood. The impressionist subject is perceived as real but it is interpreted through the artist's viewpoint to become a reflection of the real."

He is not interested in realistic work because "it is what it is, today, tomorrow and forever. A painting should be an exercise of the mind every time you look at it."

He rejects the pure abstract because "to be honest, they don't move me."

"I don't react at all," he said. "I'm not saying abstracts don't have merit. But I can stand in front of a canvas painted white with a few indentations, for a long time, trying to figure out what the artist was thinking and what he was trying to convey. I still don't know."

He considers the ideal relationship between artist and viewer an intellectual one and aims for involvement of the artist's and the viewer's personality in his work.

With this middle-of-the-road approach between representation and abstraction, he believes he is offering viewers material for imagination.

Mr. Johnston paints quickly. His work has a spontaneous exuberance that can be lost if an artist spends too much time and study with a canvas, he said.

The painter now is studying at University of Western Ontario and is finding the course load energy-consuming.

He says that "people seem to be interested in my painting and yet my art is being disrupted because of school."

Mr. Johnston has doubts and says "I've been doing what I am doing for many years now and suddenly people are talking about it."

"I'm just carrying on in my usual way."

about tv

bruce lowther

The big news in last Friday's paper seemed to be the police lottery prize and the ICBC stuff — but there was a much more significant story on the inside pages, if you consider broadcasting important.

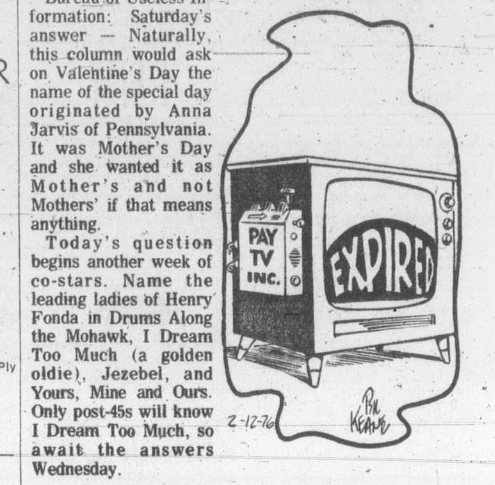

The new Socred government scrapped the NDP's proposed $500,000 public TV series Communications Mandate and I read that to mean the Socreds have no desire, at least for the time being, to follow the developing NDP path toward provincial government television.

I know the NDP never got around to it. But its communications bible was the Clark report urging government programming. With that apparently gone, and the CRTC's mid-band moves delayed, things are looking up for the mass audience. At least for the time being.

Bureau of Useless Information: Saturday's answer — Naturally, this column would ask on Valentine's Day the name of the special day originated by Anna Jarvis of Pennsylvania. It was Mother's Day and she wanted it as Mother's and not Mothers' if that means anything.

Today's question begins another week of co-stars. Name the leading ladies of Henry Fonda in Drums Along the Mohawk, I Dream Too Much (a golden oldie), Jezebel, and Yours, Mine and Ours. Only post-45s will know I Dream Too Much, so await the answers Wednesday.

Tuesday highlights

7:00 p.m.—Satire is the poetic bit on the PBS series Anyone for Tennyson, which means Dorothy Parker and Ogden Nash. By the way, it was George Kaufman who said satire is what closes Saturday night—9.

9:00—A two-hour Marcus Welby saga—4.

● 10:00—Soundstage is a must for jazz nuts, who will want to hear the 1975 Down Beat winners. Is Stephane Grappelly one?—9.

11:30—English sexpot Diana Dors makes with the black magic in the ABC suspenser Nurse Will Make It Better. If she's the nurse, anything would be better—4.

CABLE 10—7 p.m., Music Victoria; 7:30, Community Action and Challenge for Change; 8:00, Jim Leith; 8:30, Bonsoir Victoria; 9:00, Tuesday at Nine with Dick Gregory.

Tuesday movies

12:45 noon—The Million Eyes of Su Maru (silly 1967 spies), Frankie Avalon, Shirley Eaton. Today, the movies are mostly rotten, and since that fits politics too, it's shaft time—8.

1:00 p.m.—Career (hammy 1959 actor drama), Tony Franciosa, other losers. First Political Shaft: No matter how many Conservatives seek the leadership this week, the only winner will be Dalton Camp—11.

3:30—From the Terrace (truly trashy 1960 Paul Newman soaper). Part one now, part two in 24 hours, if you like to suffer—5.

7:00—Dawn Patrol (highly enjoyable and corny 1938 hokum), Errol Flynn, David Niven and all the chaps. Second shaft: Wasn't that some election Dec. 11? If you think so, can you name the guy who beat Barrett? Neither can I—12.

9:00—The Hellfighters (1969 John Wayne). Third shaft: If you dislike Reagan as a candidate, remember it could be Wayne—11.

11:30—How the West Was Won (long, slow and only fair 1963 all-star western), James Stewart, trillions more. Part one now, part two in 24 hours if you like boredom—12.

12:00—Curse of the Hidden Vault (1964 English nonames nothing). Fourth shaft: I hear the guy who comes second for the Conservative leadership is going to be the Democratic presidential candidate later—2.

12:00—I Love a Mystery (pretty bad 1967 Jack, Doc and Reggie), David Hartman, Les Crane, Jack Weston, Ida Lupino. So do I, and tell me, what's a Heward Grafftey?—6.

12:00—Lucy Gallant (soggy 1955 Jane Wyman soaper). With Charlton Heston, who makes Reagan and Wayne both look good—8.

12:30 a.m.—The Lost Man (only fair 1969 black-troubles drama), Sidney Poitier, Al Freeman. No, Matilda, not Stanfield—7.

2:05—Captain John Smith and Pocohontas (dreadful 1953 Anthony Dexter junk). Fifth shaft: If Paul Hellyer is the Tory choice, let's integrate his services immediately—6.

2:10—Starsky and Hutch (all right 1975 pilot), David Soul, Paul Michael Glaser. On TV already—8.

2:30—Cattle Empire (1958 Joel McCrea). Final Shaft: My real choice for Conservative leader and U.S. president is Peter Pollen; anything to get him out of town—7.

Tuesday radio

8:00 p.m.—CBC Tuesday Night is mainly pianist Vladimir Horowitz to 9:30, then Dame Peggy Ashcroft in the Pinter play Landscape—CBU (690).

THE ACES® ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Today's slam swings were played in a challenge match between The Aces and a group of top stars. See if you can improve on their slam bidding.

Question No. 1: You are South and hold:

♠ K Q 5 4 2/5-A
♥ A 9 7
♦ Q 10 4 3
♣ K 3

What do you bid after?

South	West	North	East
1♦	Pass	2♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3♣	Pass
4♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5♦	Pass	5 NT	Pass
6♥	Pass	6♠	Pass

NORTH 2/5-B
♠ A J 7 6 3
♦ A

WEST
♠ 10 8
♥ Q 6 5 4 2
♦ J 8 6 5 2

EAST
♥ K J 10 3
♦ K 9 7

SOUTH
♠ K Q 5 4
♥ A 9 7
♦ Q 10 4 3
♣ K 3

In the match, G.R. Nail of Houston continued on to seven and scored a large gain since The Aces stopped at six. Nail promoted the value of his black suit honors and, after North promised no missing aces by his Blackwood request for kings, Nail made a key decision and went for the brass ring.

Question No. 2: You are South, vulnerable, and hold:

♠ A K J 10 8 2 2/5-C
♥ A Q 3
♦ 10 4
♣ K 9

What do you bid after?

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♦	Pass
3♠	Pass	4♣	Pass

Answer: Four spades is a loser. A Blackwood inquiry leads to a good slam. The entire hand:

NORTH 2/5-D
♥ 8 5 4
♦ A K J 7 3

WEST
♠ 7 4 3
♥ J 10 6
♦ 8 6 5

EAST
♠ Q 9 6
♥ K 9 7 2
♦ Q 9 2
♣ 6 5 2

SOUTH
♥ A Q 3
♦ 10 4
♣ K 9

In the match, Aces Bob Hamman and Bob Wolff stopped short for The Aces and played in three no trump. In the replay, Henry Baer of Dallas Blackwooded to find two aces and then bid six no trump. A heart was led into the A-Q and Baer banged down two top spades (the correct play). A spade was then conceded and 12 tricks were claimed and The Aces lost another slam swing.

Tender-loving care is needed to realize the full potential of this charming vine-covered bungalow in Sidney. It has 5 bedrooms. The 2 in the attic are "head crackers" for tall people, but the others are good size. There is only one bathroom, the smallest I have ever seen, but there is a comfortable sauna. Seal donations drop

Campaign chairman Mrs. Jenny Dodds said the local decline reflects a provincial trend, which saw donations drop from $475,000 to $125,000.

Mrs. Dodds blamed the long mail strike for the decline, but said strikes last fall also played a part.

CAMPBELL RIVER — Louis Glendale, 34, of Campbell River has been sentenced to nine months in Vancouver Island Regional Correctional Centre for assault causing bodily harm in the stabbing of a Prince Rupert man Oct. 8 last year.

The sentence will run concurrent with a seven month sentence he received in Courtenay for shoplifting.

Judge Anthony Sarich imposed a two-year probation period and told the accused he was to abstain from liquor during the probation term.

Courtenay RCMP said Monday that Donald will appear in court here today to face additional charges.

A police spokesman said a Courtenay resident reported a masked, shot-gun wielding man entered his home Saturday morning.

DUNCAN — More retired people are required for daytime courses being arranged by the Cowichan Valley Seniors' Activities Committee.

Prbgram co-ordinator Mrs. Gudrun Hancock said the free courses, which are aimed at the needs of the retired in conjunction with Malaspina College, Nanaimo, "Are not running at full capacity."

The free courses range from golden-age exercise to pocket gardening, and have been held since mid-January in various locations in the Cowichan Valley.

The next course, in defensive driving, will start, Feb. 19 in Youbou and Duncan. There will also be a panel discussion on wills and estates in Chemainus Feb. 23, in Youbou Feb. 24 and in Duncan Feb. 25.

Those interested in the program should contact the Malaspina College office in Duncan for more information.

Qualicum Beach

Residents' group protesting cost of sewer project

QUALICUM BEACH — A residents association here claims the sewage collecting system to be installed here soon, will put a $5,000 debt on each of the village's 800 homes.

The group also said that more debts will be added to cover the construction of a treatment plant at French Creek.

The village was ordered last year by the Pollution Control Board to install the system.

Donald McMillan, president of the Qualicum Beach Residents Association, said in a letter to the village council that the sewage collecting system "is a huge and terribly expensive undertaking for a village of 1,600 people, and an enormous debt for 800 houses assisted by a few commercial businesses."

He said, "It seems quite clear there is no way of knowing what this huge undertaking, precipitated by some previous council, is going to cost, and do members of the present council understand their responsibility in this connection?"

Engineers estimate cost of the system will be between $3.4 million and $3.7 million, but McMillan said there is usually a 10 to 20 per cent overrun on contract prices, so the cost will therefore be "between $3,940,000 and $4,440,000." In his five page letter to the village council, McMillan asked whether contract prices would be firm or if there would be a cost-plus clause.

McMillan said the cost will be further increased by inflation.

He also asked council where it will get the money. He wants to know if a $240,000 provincial government grant will definitely be obtained, and pointed out that the grant would represent a very small percentage of the total cost.

McMilan also had reservations about the $2.5 million the Nanaimo Region Board is to borrow on behalf of Qualicum Beach. He said the interest rate will probably be 12 to 13 per cent at least, and he said he doubted if the money can be borrowed for more than five years. "After that a new loan would have to be negotiated at higher interest rates."

In his letter, McMillan said beach pollution could be cleaned up without the big debt of the sewer system. He suggested the use of holding tanks similar to those used at the George Inn. Residents could be restrained from discharging detergent into septic tanks which destroys the bacterial action, he said.

The French Creek treatment plant and trunk sewers connecting it with Qualicum Beach will be paid for in part by property owners in this village.

McMillan said that a year ago it was estimated the cost of the first phase of construction would be $3.5 million and annual operating costs would be $74,000. He said 10 to 15 per cent should be added to these figures for inflation.

In the second phase it will require $2.5 million in capital costs with estimated annual operating costs of $115,000.

Council was also asked by McMillan what assurances it had that the Qualicum Beach collection system will be completed at about the same time as the treatment plant. "If it is completed well ahead of the plant, it could cause considerable financial difficulties for the village."

James Bay Athletic Association and Oak Bay took different routes to victory Monday in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League action.

Tony Anderson scored five of his team-high 23 points in overtime after the teams finished regulation time at 72-72. It was the first time overtime has had to be used this season.

In an exhibition series on the weekend in Powell River, league-leading London Boxing Club Seniors scored two wins, a 72-57 decision over Port McNeill and a 95-62 triumph over Powell River Lakers.

Duff McCagley scored 26 points to lead the Boxers in the first game and Jim MacKay hit for 29 in the second.

Shoestring budget blamed

CNIB admits shortcomings

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

There's a hollowness through the Blanshard Street building of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Its spacious rooms rarely ring with the laughter of many of Victoria's 450 blind, though they presumably need companionship in a society that shuns the abnormal.

The hollowness echoes throughout CNIB which — despite hard work and dedication by many — doesn't meet the needs of all its members.

That consensus from CNIB supporters and opponents alike in Victoria came on the heels of National White Cane Week Feb. 1-7.

Most say the agency, on a shoestring budget gained largely through United Way, can't hire enough counsellors or do enough public relations work to attract volunteers, and fails badly in providing vocational training for the blind.

With just two counsellors for 700 Vancouver Island members, the Island CNIB can only help the newly-blind in their initial adjustment, and provide a minor social centre for the sightless elderly.

A recent report by a blind Vancouver woman saying the CNIB has "totally failed" to provide training programs has prodded critics of the agency into the open.

But Island district administrator Isabel Beveridge and B.C.-Yukon director Art McNaughton say they welcome the report and agree the CNIB has partly failed.

"Because most of our money is voluntary, you're always scrambling for dollars," McNaughton said.

"We're not happy with our record in the employment field. But we shouldn't be in the employment service."

"Blind people are part of the human race, and they're citizens of Canada." Why, then, shouldn't Manpower be better equipped to handle placement of the trained blind, he asked.

The CNIB has been criticized for controlling job placement of its members in the past.

Association of Concerned Handicapped spokesman Frank Hunter of Vancouver, for one, said he and others fought for years to get the B.C. Blind Workers' Compensation Act repealed in 1975.

He said the act gave the CNIB a "pool of cheap labor exempt from the minimum wage" and allowed it to place the blind anywhere and even take them out of jobs despite their protests.

Helen Austin, handicapped consultant for the provincial labor department, complains the CNIB promoted concession stand jobs for the blind that paid "slave wages" before the provincial government under the New Democratic Party made the jobs part of the civil service last year.

Full-time sales work at liquor store kiosks now pays about $925 a month, when wages were formerly as low as $530 a month, Hunter said.

"B.C.'s must be the most progressive CNIB in Canada, though," Ms. Austin said.

It was probably CNIB pressure that got the province Canada's only legislation allowing seeing-eye dogs to go anywhere with their owners, she said.

"People are virtually ejected from restaurants and movie theatres in other provinces" on a manager's whim that animals not be allowed. Ms. Austin said.

And B.C. is the only province in which the CNIB lets members see their files on demand.

That's also a product of recent legislation, and though Miss Beveridge says very few members have asked to see the files — which Mrs. Austin says often contain "common gossip" — the CNIB willingly opened those requested and even had to delete some portions on demand.

Secrecy of client files was a failure pointed out by Vancouver dentistry graduate Dr. Linda Headley in a May, 1975, report on the unmet needs of the blind in B.C. and the Yukon.

Dr. Headley said the CNIB "must undergo a major metamorphosis" before it will achieve the equal rights for the blind that other minority groups are now seeking.

But two active Victoria men who have received extensive CNIB help through their blindness say the agency does good work.

Mike Brodsky is a grateful member who says instructors did "a tremendous job" counselling him to adjust to blindness, teaching him mobility, and arranging for his guide dog.

CNIB instructors gave him free Braille and typing lessons, too.

Brodsky said the blind needn't expect the same wages as sighted people because of tax concessions available to them in Canada.

"The CNIB is doing the best it can with the money it has," another members Errol Hembroff, said. Hembroff, a recently-appointed CNIB board member, said the agency relies too heavily on bequests and donations.

CNIB's 1975 budget for B.C. and the Yukon was $660,000, about 20 per cent of which came from the provincial secretary's and health departments.

The only money CNIB saw from Ottawa was a $55,000 grant to its national office.

Hembroff said money was not the only problem, though.

Just as it was impossible to buy a devoted mother, he said, so it was impossible to buy the volunteers needed to provide companionship and instruction for the sightless.

Hembroff is one of two blind computer programmers in B.C.

He and a Vancouver man attended a University of Manitoba training program set up by the university and the CNIB, according to McNaughton.

That program is one of the few for vocational training under CNIB auspices.

But McNaughton said the blind have better opportunities today than ever before to train through normal channels.

A bigger problem now is hurdling the barrier of prejudice that makes most sighted people hesitate to hire even highly-qualified handicapped, he said.

"It's fine to say you're qualified, but it's something else to talk to an employer into believing it."

There's still a lot to do in the field of job training, but McNaughton said one plus is a program under the province's Aid to Handicapped division that pays tuition and maintenance for blind persons attending regular institutions.

Chess weekend has fun section

What could be Vancouver Island's biggest chess tournament in years will take place at Saanich's Gordon Head recreation centre Saturday and Sunday.

Billed as the Greater Victoria winter two-in-one championship, the tournament will have two sections.

In the Open section, designed for tournament regulars, there will be an entry fee of $8, with memberships in Chess Federation of Canada and B.C. Chess Federation mandatory.

But there will also be a Fun section, with a low entry fee of $3 and no memberships of any kind required. This section is designed for players who don't often get involved and want to have some chess fun at a low price.

In the Open section, the tournament will be a qualifying event for this year's senior B.C. Closed, as well as a qualifying event for the B.C. junior championship.

And latest indications are there will be plenty of players shooting for these two spots.

Paul Brown, BCCF president, said by telephone from Vancouver at the weekend that at least 10 players would be coming from Vancouver alone, all for the Open section.

There is likely to be good representation from Nanaimo, plus the usual strong contingent from Greater Victoria. Other Island centres will also be represented.

For those wanting to play in the Open section and having no CFC-BCCF memberships, these will be available at the Gordon Head centre, just off Feltham Road, during registration on Saturday.

Registration opens at 9 a.m. Saturday and closes around noon, with the opening round shortly after. There are to be three rounds in both sections Saturday and two more Sunday.

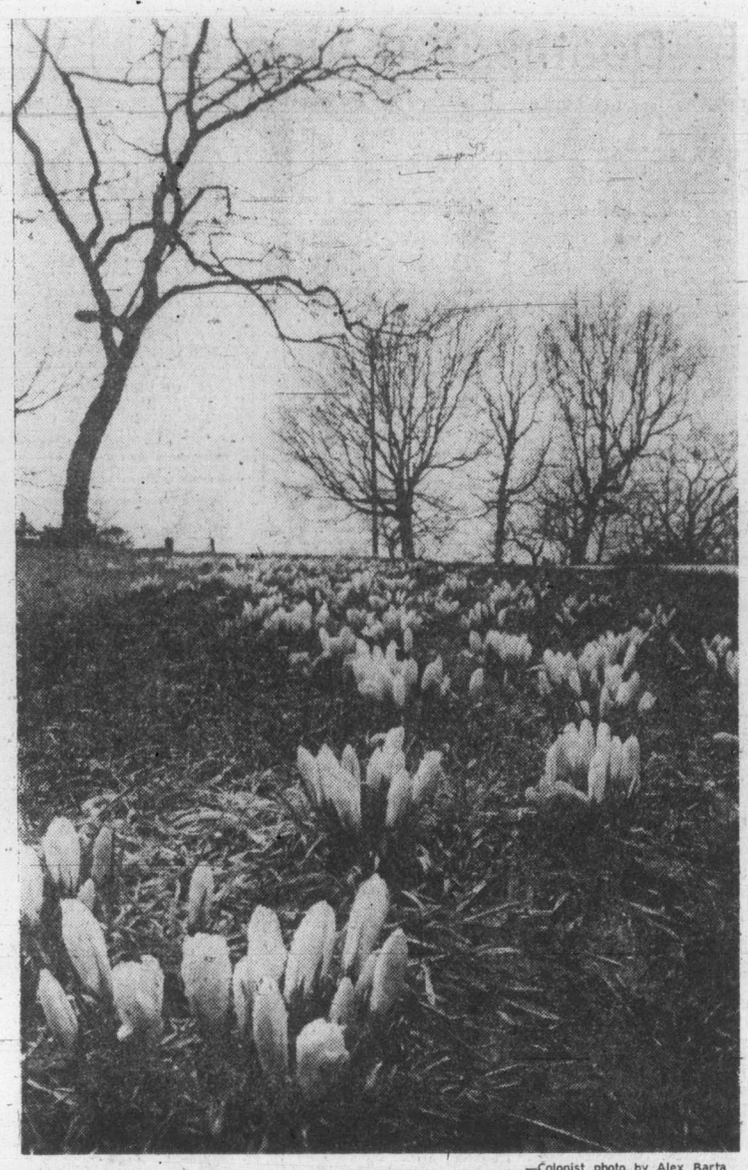

Players in both sections are to supply their own sets as well as clocks, wherever possible. There will also be some clocks and sets available for purchase or rent during registrations.

Among the leading Greater Victoria players competing in the Open section will be Dan Scoones, Terry Wong and Jeff Reeve.

Scoones and Wong have already qualified for the B.C. Closed through previous tournament victories but Reeve will be trying hard to become a third Vancouver Island player in this year's B.C. Closed.

Damage high from storm

HALIFAX (CP) — Initial figures indicate $40 million to $50 million damage has been reported by fishermen in south-western Nova Scotia as a result of a Feb. 2 storm. Provincial Fisheries Minister A. M. Cameron said much of this damage involves buildings and other structures not considered to be fishing equipment and therefore not eligible for government compensation.

Heritage Canada honors four B.C. residents

Two Victorians were among four British Columbians cited by Heritage Canada Monday for their work in heritage preservation.

Major award winner was architectural historian Martin Segger, 29, chairman of the city's heritage advisory committee and co-author of the city's heritage building report, who won a three-week tour of European country of his choice.

Heritage Canada is a federal non-profit organization started three years ago with a $12-million grant from Ottawa. With a 10,000 membership, it is associated with about 100 conservation organizations across Canada, including 15 in B.C.

Segger expects to use his award to visit Britain next summer to observe its heritage programs.

He is in charge of training workers in museum techniques throughout the province but is now on leave to conduct a study of training programs and needs for the National Museums Corporation of Canada.

As well, he lectures on Renaissance art at the University of Victoria and his book on the history of Victoria architecture will be published soon.

The other two provincial winners were Archie Miller and Alan Woodland, both of New Westminster, for their book on that city's history and architecture.

The Victoria Hallmark Society opened a display Monday at the Provincial Museum as part of its Heritage Week program.

The display depicts seven city buildings demolished since the 1930s and is called Oh What a Lovely House — Yes, but It's Not There Anymore.

The second part of its program, according to president Don Reksten, is to encourage potential heritage homeowners to volunteer their homes for designation.

Already, Reksten said, six owners had expressed interest in this program.

Heritage designation first requires council approval and then that of the provincial secretary but Reksten added "there is no obligation by the city to recompense owners" through lower taxes.

"People want to see their homes protected and not demolished," he said.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden notes

I had a rather pathetic but amusing letter from one of my readers last week who had gotten herself completely bogged down in trying to make out her vegetable seed order.

The catalogue she was using listed 23 different kinds of corn, 11 varieties of garden peas, 31 tomatoes and 12 carrots — and even the humble radish offered 18 choices.

Each of these, according to the catalogue description, was the biggest, the earliest, the — most vigorous, the sweetest, the most disease-resistant or the best-flavored.

After ticking a lettuce variety which seemed to be just about right for her garden, my confused friend turned the page, only to be confronted by another variety which was also, without question, the world's finest lettuce.

At this point she gave up and tossed the ball to me.

I don't pretend to know which is the "best" variety of any vegetable for our climate, for there far too many newcomers in the seed lists every year to test more than a very small fraction of them.

In any case, I doubt if you could find any two gardeners who could agree on what constitutes quality in any given vegetable.

For instance, you might like a waxy, firm potato, while my taste may run to a mealy, floury type.

A good onion, to you, could possibly be so pungent they can't be peeled without wearing a respirator — I like mine so sweet and mild they can be eaten raw, between slices of rye bread.

I select my carrots for pulling young, while not much bigger than your middle finger, while you may want a variety which can be stored all winter without going mouldy.

With these limitations, about the best I can do to provide some guidance in the choice of vegetable varieties is to list and describe a few kinds which have performed well in my own garden and which have won a nod of approval from the martinet of the Chesnut kitchen.

As I say, there may be and probably are much better kinds, but my next few columns will be devoted to describing a few varieties which have taken kindly to my soil and aspect.

Starting with beets, we grow Detroit Dark Red, quite an old standard variety found in almost every seed catalogue. It is a round beet with deep red flesh, growing to the size of a baseball in about 58 days.

Not that we leave them that long — we prefer baby beets, golf ball size.

In addition to this round beet, we always grow half a row of a cylinder-shaped beet especially for slicing and pickling.

These roots grow to six inches long and three inches in diameter in 46 days, and as they tend to push themselves high out of the ground, the plants should be hilled up with the draw hoe, as you would potatoes, to avoid sun scald.

This cylinder-shaped beet is listed in the different catalogues under a variety of names, such as Deep Cylinder, Cylindra, Housewives' Choice and Formanova.

Incidentally, both the round and cylinder beet tops make delicious steamed or boiled greens, more tasty than spinach.

One rather annoying factor when growing beets is the fact that what appears to be one seed is actually a cluster of seeds, so no matter how carefully you space them out when sowing, you still have to thin them out or "single" them.

The plant breeders have been working on this problem and have come up with a variety called Burgundy or Mono-Gem which produces only one beet plant per seed, and therefore requires no singling.

As this is finnicky, back-breaking work, I am looking forward to making a test sowing of Burgundy this year.

Jack Smith

Fantasies are the last thing a man gives up, and every year when I go to a boat show I find that mine are still with me, even though common sense has long since urged me to let them go.

I have always loved ships and boats; almost anything that floats. Even Ivory Soap. But I know now that a boat is something I am never going to own.

Experience has taught me that a boat would come to the same end as my golf clubs and my tennis racket, except that it would be too big to keep in a closet.

It would stand idle in its slip, an embarrassing reminder of the difference between the man I am and the man I fancy being.

So it was with a feeling of safe detachment that I looked in on a show the other afternoon. I knew I now had the maturity to run an eye down the hull of a sloop or put my hands on the wheel of a power cruiser without the risk of emotional involvement.

I was pleased to find that my response was purely esthetic to boats that only a few years ago would have made me mean with longing.

Boats can, after all, be regarded simply as things of beauty. They are much more beautiful than automobiles, to my mind, because they are required to live in harmony with wind and sea. The demands of nature are in every line.

Automobiles, on the contrary, have few requirements of design beyond round wheels, and are thus subject to the self-indulgent whims of their creators.

I was reminded of my old self, though, when I stopped to admire a 22-foot sloop with a yellow fiberglass hull and white nylon sails. "Ready to sail," a placard said, "$4,135."

Why you could hardly buy a car for that anymore; I was amused to sense a slight increase in the tempo of my pulse, but no perspiration appeared on my forehead as it used to. I was quite in control.

A young couple sat in the cockpit of the sloop with a salesman. The young man appeared to be in hypnosis. He was looking into the eyes of the salesman, but not seeing him, I suspected.

In his right hand he held a yellow pencil. He had been figuring on a pad, but the figures hadn't worked out the way he hoped they would.

The women's eyes were out of focus. For a moment I thought she was staring at me, but her eyes were fixed on some vision that couldn't be seen by anyone else.

Was she thinking of the wind and the sea and sunny days in a bay? Or was she thinking of old bills and new clothes and unpaid-for college educations?

I drifted on, glad to be free of all that.

A sign caught my eye: Now's the time to buy . . . if you don't do it now, maybe you never will. It didn't apply to me. A year or two ago it might have. But my time had already passed. I was now in the time of never will.

Walking down a row of booths I noticed a display of the 1976 Sea and Boating Almanac—Southern California, Arizona and Baja edition.

It would have the tide charts, and my wife would like to have them so she would know when the tidepools would be exposed on the shore below our house in Baja.

I picked up a copy and thumbed through the pages on Baja until I came to Punta Santos Tomas:

"As a shelter, Punta Santo Tomas looks very good on the charts. However, the bay is loaded with kelp, which must be dealt with on entering and anchoring.

"In addition the local headland wind pattern is most violent. Because the headland of Santo Tomas is large, the effects are impressive.

"In the afternoon the wind, which has been about eight knots above the point, can be blowing 40-50 knots behind our downwind from the point in the 'calm' anchorage.

"This feature is found all along the coast, perhaps best known in San Pedro's Hurricane Gulch. The effect at Santo Tomas is roughly equal to three times that of Hurricane Gulch.

"Try this area in the early afternoon, allowing enough time to get back to the coves described above. If you can get in and hold, this is a charming place with much to see. Underwater life is rich and hasn't been overworked yet. At the simple fish camp ashore, Senor Gomez is a delightful Mexican host."

There was a footnote in italics: "This is indeed the same Senor Gomez who figures so prominently in Jack Smith's column. Astute readers will surely recognize the house Senor Gomez built for Jack, dramatically perched on the rocks overlooking this anchorage."

So there we were, Gomez and I, in the Sea and Boating Almanac. We were never going to get into Who's Who, either one of us. But how many people in Who's Who were ever going to get into the sea and Boating Alamanac?

What a thrill it would be, I thought, to bring my own boat in there someday, coming around that headland in a 40-knot wind, with me at the wheel and my wife up at the bow with her machete, cutting the kelp.

My eyes went out of focus.

Sydney Harris

My first car was a convertible — with a rumble-seat yet. And, until a few years ago, that was the only kind of car I ever bought for myself.

It was one of the few remaining ways left to middle-aged men to delude themselves that they were still young and dashing and romantic.

Now we read that the last American-made convertibles are on the assembly-line; after the 1976 models (and only one make), the open-air car will disappear on the domestic scene. And another era passes.

It is hard to believe that only a brief dozen years ago the American convertible had its best year ever — in 1963, when nearly a half-million such were made and sold.

This final year, only 16,000 are being turned out, at a shockingly extravagant cost (which, however, won't prevent all of them from being grabbed up, as "collector's items" at least).

My wistfulness at this news is, however, more than a bit of romantic nostalgia.

As a man who intensely dislikes air-conditioning, and suffers it only as a necessary evil, I regret the loss of fresh air and the wind blowing through your hair as you tooled along the highway.

It is a feeling that cannot be duplicated riding in an hermetically-sealed bubble with "fake" air whistling up your trouser-legs.

Even beyond the convertible, I recall the glorious double-decker bus with the open second-storey, that used to tootle along Chicago's Michigan Avenue from one end of the city to the other — as did similar buses in New York's Fifth Avenue, and throughout London, of course.

Sometimes, as a boy, I would flip a bus (it was only a nickel then) and grab the front seat on the top storey, just to ride to the south end of town and back for the fun of it.

I was too young to drive a car, but I could imagine myself wheeling this gay red monster through the park, with the warm sun on my head and the breeze flapping my ears.

Pollution has its more serious, and even sinister, aspects, but one of its most poignant losses is the old sense of "oneness" with the sun and the air that was felt in an open car or an open bus. For a while, at least, you could recapture a feeling of affinity with nature, even in an urban setting or on a rushing highway.

No more, no more. We have stunk ourselves into sterile coolness in our self-contained cocoons of cars and apartments, where nothing can be heard but the relentless hum of the machinery and nothing smelled but stale frigidity.

For many, the convertible was merely a beau geste, but for others of us it remains the beau ideal in getting from one place to another; and a part of our youth has vanished with its extinction.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — The other night on TV, Johnny Carson casually tossed off this line: "All I remember about the Second World War are pinups of Mara Corday." Right girl, Wrong war.

During the Korean war, you could find pinups of Mara. She was the most luscious pinup of that war and it wasn't long until a Universal talent scout got her a contract at that studio where she stayed for four years.

During that stay she met and fell in love with the late Richard Long, one of the most popular actors on the lot. He later starred on TV in such series as The Big Valley and Nanny and the Professor.

They were married 18 years until Richard's death a year ago from heart disease. During most of those years, Mara sidetracked her own career to work full time as a wife and mother.

Rudy Mate, a producer-cinematographer friend of the Longs, showed some of Mara's pictures around the studios. She soon was nabbed for a featured role in an upcoming Joe Forrester with Lloyd Bridges.

The phones have been ringing. She's back in harness — and loving it. And she still can fill a bikini like the old days.

Even Carson wants her on his show. Johnny, it was Betty Grable on your locker during the Second World War, not Mara.

Provincial COURT

An 11-day preliminary hearing ended Monday in Victoria provincial court with a decision by Judge William Ostler that four Victoria area men must face a higher-court trial on a major narcotics charge.

The charge against David Michael Henderson, 22, William Paul Murray, 27, David Yosha Robertson, 38, and Donald William Thomson, 42, is one of conspiracy between Sept. 1 and Oct. 19, 1975, to traffic in pethidine in Victoria county.

Once their hearing ended, a second began for Murray and Thomson on a 30-count charge of conspiracy to traffic in 10 drugs, conspiracy to possess them for trafficking and possession of them for the same purpose. It will continue Thursday.

Indications were a separate charge against Henderson of trafficking in pethidine would be dropped. He is free on bail while bail has been refused for Robertson.

In the court section of Judge F. S. Green, a 21-day jail term followed by 18 months' probation was the penalty for Richard Verdier Rowlinson, 38, of 647 Pine, who will also have to do 80 hours of community-service work after leaving jail.

Rowlinson pleaded guilty Thursday to a Saanich charge of stealing about $76 worth of lumber Jan. 27 from a construction site.

Green said Rowlinson had a "disgraceful" criminal record and was on probation at the time of the theft. But on the other hand, Rowlinson was looking after a large family and was a man "of ambition and hard work."

Wayne Raymond Pilkington, 27, of 101 Island Highway, pleaded guilty to a Port Alberni charge of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-analysis test Oct. 14, 1975, and to a Saanich charge of impaired driving and common assault Dec. 14, 1975.

The sentences by Green were $600 or 60 days for the Port Alberni offences and 21 days for the two in Saanich, the common assault coming when Pilkington struck a driver who had criticized his wife's driving.

Defence lawyer Roger Cardinal said Pilkington had decided to serve the time instead of paying the fines, which meant a total jail term of 60 days. Green added an 18-month driving ban.

Community-service work orders were also included by Green in sentences imposed for two persons in separate cases.

Longest was a 40-hour order for Susan Marilyn Infanti, 28, of 513 Ardersier, who pleaded guilty one week ago today to a Saanich charge of shoplifting two food items and some film Feb. 9 from a Safeway store. She was put on probation for eight months.

John Hendrik Van Den Berg, 22, of 225 Quebec, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of possession Feb. 6 of about three-quarters of an ounce of hashish. He was fined $60, put on probation for three months and instructed to do 30 hours of community-service work.

Bail was refused by Green for Victoria area resident Anthony Garfield Brown, 35, address not known, on a Victoria charge of defrauding the public Dec. 23 of $80 received from the B.C. human resources department.

The judge noted Brown had a record of 51 offences dating back to 1958 in various places across Canada and also took into account a new four-count Victoria charge of uttering read Monday against Brown and involving a total of about $1,196.

Brown was remanded one week for further hearing.

Green also refused bail for Mark Jonathan Twiss, 23, of 129 Croft, on a three-count charge of uttering two cheques Nov. 14 in Saanich for a total of $797 and obtaining cash between Nov. 14 and Jan. 2 from a Victoria bank through worthless cheques.

At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel David Adams, Green prohibited publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details. Twiss was remanded to Thursday for further hearing.

In traffic court, David Allen Diamond, 20, of 1043 Sutlej, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of driving Feb. 8 while under a licence suspension imposed Jan. 6. Diamond was sentenced by Judge Blake Allan to 10 days in jail and a six-month driving ban.

Clay Sherman Hodges, 18, of 927 Craigflower, was fined a total of $600 by Green and banned from driving for 12 months following a plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of criminally negligent driving and failing to remain. Hodges' car hit a parked vehicle Feb. 8 on Yates, then went through 19 traffic lights and seven traffic control devices during a chase from downtown Victoria to a dead-end street in Vic West.

Gas-saver claim 'unsubstantiated'

An expert witness in engine testing told Victoria county court Monday he could not substantiate claims of increased horsepower and gasoline mileage after an air induction valve called Ball-Matic.

Martin Friend, a technical officer at the National Research Council in Ottawa and in charge of its fuels and lubricants laboratory and engine testing section, was testifying in the trial of Glen Edward Clarke, 1331 Vining.

Clarke, carrying on business as Turbo Sales, is accused under a section of the Combines Investigation Act dealing with false advertising of making statements in April, 1974, which "purported to be statements of fact but were untrue."

The indictment alleges the statements were made in a weekly entertainment magazine This Week, with a circulation of 215,000, to promote the sale of Ball-Matic Air Injectors.

The statements recorded in the indictment are:

1. "Increase horsepower . . . Gas Mileage."

2. "Makes your carburetor breathe deeper . . . use more air, less gass."

3. "Now — you can enjoy a marvelous new kind of power — astonishing pep—Get Up and Go and save money too."

Michael John Poulton, first witness in the two-day trial, said he responded to the advertisement and received an air injector for which he paid $18.90, covering purchase price and sales tax.

Poulton, an investigator with the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department, sent the device to the mechanical engineering division of the National Research Council for tests.

Friend, who made the tests, said the device had "no significant effect on the manifold vacuum" and "only insignificant effect" on fuel flow.

He said the Ball-Matic Air Injector was, technically, not an injector but an induction valve.

Fitted in the carburetor of an engine, it is supposed to increase the air supply at higher speeds as the manifold vacuum decreases. It consists of a chamber with a plastic ball which covers an opening.

He contrasted the device to a supercharger, which, he said, together with other necessary modifications to an engine, would cost $600 to $800.

He said he would not expect the Ball-Matic to make any difference because the amount of air induced would be small compared with normal air flow.

"If it sucked a vast amount of air you would see a change in engine operation immediately," he told Judge Montague Drake.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Mike Hutchison, Friend agreed he wasn't given information on the kind of car for which the device was ordered, a 1966 Pontiac. The test was done on a 1961 283-cubic-inch V-8 General Motors engine.

He agreed he had done tests on a device called Mini Turbo Charger, used for the same purpose, and that he drew essentially the same conclusions.

But, he said, he made no direct comparisons between the two.

Asked about tests done by an American company called Fema Corporation which claimed the Mini could produce 16.7 per cent more miles to a gallon of gas, Friend said he disputed the manner in which those tests were conducted and did not consider them adequate for a comparative test.

The trial continues today. The Crown's case is being presented by Michael Roell of Vancouver.

Helmcken

Kinsmen honor first president

The dynamic spirit of the 50-year-old Victoria Kinsmen Club may be measured by its first president, still working full-time "and enjoying every minute of it."

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken, now 75, will be an honorary guest at the club's golden jubilee ball this month.

Helmcken was the Victoria club's charter president when the inaugural meeting of the only all-Canadian service club was held Feb. 20, 1926.

"We brought a new spark of life to the service clubs," he said Monday. "We worked like the mischief."

He said members — young men from 21 to 40 — raised money to help establish the first Queen Alexandra Solarium at Mill Bay. The solarium has since been relocated at Arbutus Road.

Projects in the 50 years have also included:

● Donation of $65,000 to Victoria Memorial Arena;

● Sponsorship of mother's marches for rehabilitation. The drive this year has already collected $85,500, some of which will go to Arbutus Crafts.

● Sponsorship of baseball and soccer teams and 89th (Kinsmen) Air Cadet squadron;

● Backing of Schmockey Night for past seven years;

● Wartime collections of milk for Britain, bundles for Britain and the merchant marine.

● Financing of four Little League parks, city wading pools, and tennis courts at Cook and Queens;

Past members and friends are invited to the anniversary ball at The Empress Feb. 28. Tickets are available from members at 383-4035 or 477-3931.

Restrictions on escapers

Jail complaint to be studied

Peter George MacLean, 24, last to be recaptured of the 10 men listed Dec. 16 as escaping from Wilkinson Road jail, said Monday things weren't good in his part of the jail — and somebody is going to look into it.

MacLean appeared before Judge F. S. Green on a routine one-week remand before a preliminary hearing April 22 of a Colwood charge of break-in with intent, and was routinely asked by the judge if he had anything to say.

"I'm doing four months for escaping," said MacLean, who pleaded guilty to his part in the 10-man break, "and morale out there is pretty bad on our tier . . . it's getting to the point where I'm not going to be responsible for what happens."

Asked by Green for reasons, MacLean said only that inmates on the tier were allowed only to shower once a day and sometimes didn't get that.

Green asked prosecutor Scott Marshall to "investigate and report back if needed." Jail officials, informed of MacLean's statement, had no comment.

Of the 10 men listed as escaping, all but MacLean were reported recaptured within 40 hours. MacLean, considered the least dangerous of the lot, was picked up in Victoria several weeks later.

He and three others have pleaded guilty to escaping charges and been sentenced to four-month jail terms. Five more are awaiting hearing on similar charges and it appears the 10th, John Edward Wonnacott, is not going to be charged because he was sentenced in Nanaimo to five years for post-break offences.

Wonnacott is serving the term in the B.C. penitentiary in New Westminster but most of the others are back at Wilkinson Road and have been kept apart from other inmates most of the time.

They are the only residents of a second-floor protective-custody tier and some have previously complained in court about their post-break restrictions.

90-year sentence 40 months

A 23-year-old Victoria area man can be thankful for the word "concurrent."

Donald Robert Steele of no fixed address was sentenced Monday in Victoria provincial court by Judge F. S. Green to a total of 89 years and 10 months in prison for 42 separate crimes.

Because Green made all 42 sentences concurrent, Steele will have to serve a maximum only of the longest — 40 months.

Steele had pleaded guilty to 13 charges from Victoria, Saanich, Courtenay, Campbell River, Vancouver and West Vancouver, dated from Nov. 24, 1975, to Feb. 6 of this year and containing 37 counts of false pretences, three of possession of known stolen property and one each of break-in and theft and obtaining lodgings by fraud.

The total of goods, cash and services involved in the 42 counts was more than $5,190.

Anderson hearing delayed

Next legal hearing in the case of former Victoria city police constable Thomas Anderson was delayed Monday to March 15, when the Supreme Court of Canada will hear arguments on the crown's bid to appeal Anderson's recent victory in B.C. appeal court.

Anderson quit the force May 9, 1974, after being convicted of assault causing bodily harm. But the B.C. court quashed the conviction and directed Anderson's acquittal. The crown's decision to appeal is delaying an attempt by Anderson to rejoin the Victoria force.

'As things stand now' . . .

The long-awaited state-of-the-province speech by Premier Bennett will be televised Friday, "as things stand now," the premier's public relations consultant, David Brown, said Monday.

Originally the speech was to have been given last night. That date was later changed to "tentatively Thursday" of this week.

Monday the date was confirmed "as things stand" for Friday at 6:30 on CTV and 7 on CBC television.

The premier will not be available for comment, "as things stand" until the following Monday morning, said Brown.

As for the TV appearance, arrangements have been made for the speech to be taped sometime Friday afternoon under the direction of a special producer. The tape will then be made available to CTV and CBC.

Asked why the premier wouldn't be available for questions on the content of his speech until three days after it was delivered, Brown said he didn't know.

Progressive Conservative Leader Scott Wallace was blunter.

"It's a typical Madison Avenue approach," he said. "This is the type of politician who makes statements during an election campaign, then tells the people what he really meant after he's in office.

"It's disturbing, to say the least. He's been keeping the province on tenterhooks for weeks regarding this great message, and now he's not prepared to tell us what he means, by whatever he's going to say, until three days after he's said it."

Lockheed Orions

Plane deal delayed by scandal

OTTAWA (CP) — The Lockheed scandal apparently has delayed indefinitely the signing of a $950 million military contract under which Canada would buy 18 Lockheed Orions as long-range patrol aircraft.

Defence Minister James Richardson, after a 90-minute meeting Monday with Lockheed chairman Robert Haack, said collapse of negotiations is possible unless Lockheed is able to overcome serious problems resulting from the scandal.

Richardson called the meeting after Daniel Stoughton resigned last Friday as Lockheed chairman. He had testified before a U.S. congressional committee that Lockheed had bribed foreign officials to gain contracts. The testimony appears to have scuttled a $1.2 billion Lockheed sale to Japan.

Richardson told a news conference after the meeting he had been assured by Haack a new financing arrangement could be expected later this year.

"The difficulty has not been resolved," he said as both men refused to speculate on when the contract might be signed.

Haack said the effect of the Japanese order on Lockheed and on the Canadian sale has been exaggerated.

About $200 million worth of subcontracts to Canadair Ltd., Montreal, to build Orion parts would not be affected by a Japanese decision not to sign a contract, he said.

W. R. Wilson, Lockheed's senior vice president, said the impact of the Japanese sale on Lockheed has been "vastly overstated." Canadian officials later agreed, saying the Japanese contract called for aircraft to be built in Japan.

Also with Haack were Roy Anderson, Lockheed's new vice-chairman and chief financial officer, and Fred Leary, executive vice-president of the Bankers Trust of New York, a consortium of 24 banks.

After meetings with Richardson, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald and A. R. Bailey, deputy minister of the supply and services depart-

A 38-year-old Victoria man who was injured twice while in the navy and subsequently discharged on medical grounds, has been fighting a losing battle with military bureaucracy for five years in his efforts to get a disability pension.

Dennis Turgeon of 561 Mount View Avenue says he gave 17 years of his life to the Royal Canadian Navy and in return was kicked out because he was no longer of use to the military.

Although he will never be able to hold a job as a result of two head injuries he received while in the navy, the veterans affairs department pays him only $20 a month, based on a 5-per-cent disability assessment.

At 38, Turgeon can never work again; he can never have sexual intercourse again.

"I ruined my life in the navy. I'm finished and all they want to give me is $20 a month," he said in an interview.

Turgeon has great difficulty talking. His statements come slowly and falteringly.

He takes more than 2,000 painkilling pills a year to control the pains which are the result of his two head injuries.

Turgeon's story sounds like a bureaucratic nightmare.

Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon says the DVA's position on the case is a "mass of contradictions."

Turgeon's story begins May 28, 1965, when he was a leading seaman.

Plea bargaining attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada says attorneys-general and judges should act to stop plea bargaining, which the commission defines as any agreement by the accused to plead guilty in return for some benefit.

The commission, in a working paper on control of the process of criminal procedure, says plea bargaining could be ended at once if attorneys-general directed prosecutors to discontinue the practice. It recommended this.

Plea bargaining explains why, for instance, many murder charges end as manslaughter convictions. The charge of murder is placed to scare the accused into pleading guilty to manslaughter, saving time and money.

The prosecution, to induce a guilty plea, also can offer to reduce the number of charges, proceed by summary rather than the more serious indictment procedure, and recommend a light sentence.

The commission condemns this.

Plea bargaining takes place in private. This means that the judge and the public never really hear the case.

"A dangerous criminal should not be let off with a minor conviction and penalty just because he is willing to plead guilty, and thus save the state the time and expense of a trial," the commission said. "Nor does society benefit from a negotiated plea of guilty by a petty offender who should not have been prosecuted."

It also recommended changes that would make attorneys-general more politically accountable for the administration of justice. Among them:

● Attorneys-general should issue directives to prosecutors establishing policy on discretion in placing charges. The policy guides should be made public.

● Consent of the attorney-general to prosecute charges should be required to ensure uniformity of law enforcement across Canada. "As applied to the offence of public

Reporters nabbed in Lagos

LONDON (Reuter) — The Reuter news agency office in Lagos was closed Monday by police who took the three Reuter correspondents in Nigeria away for questioning.

A message received before the Reuter circuit to London was disconnected, said chief correspondent Colin Fox, who is British, and his Nigerian assistants, Godwin Ironkwe and Gabriel Ogunsekan, had been taken away in a police car.

No reason has been given for the action against the Reuter staff, who reported Friday's abortive coup attempt in Nigeria.

Air Canada 'hot seat' for long-time employee

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Taylor, a long-time Air Canada official, has been named president and chief executive officer of the publicly-owned airline, Transport Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

He will replace Ralph Vaughan who has resigned to become a senior Air Canada vice-president and policy adviser And, as chief executive officer, taylor takes over from Yves Pratte who resigned in bitterness as airline chairman in November.

The appointment was announced after an Air Canada board of directors meeting attended by Lang here.

Taylor, 50, has been Air Canada vice-president of public affairs since October, 1973.

The transport minister did not appoint a new chairman although it is understood the job was offered to prominent Montreal businessman Pierre Des Marais who turned it down. With the chief executive officer's duties transferred to the president, the chairman's job has lost much of its power.

Taylor
. . . 'challenge'

Des Marais is an Air Canada director and a leading municipal political leader in the Montreal area.

Pierre Taschereau, Canadian National Railways chairman, has been acting chairman since Pratte's resignation.

Taylor said he will aim at making a profit this year after a 1975 Air Canada deficit of $12.5 million. The deficit in 1974 was $9.2 million.

"We have been through very difficult periods in the last few months," he said.

"My challenge is to try and

Art Lee retains Vancouver seat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two B.C. Supreme Court judges Monday upheld the 1974 federal election of Liberal MP Art Lee in Vancouver East.

Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz and Justice Davie Fulton dismissed a petition from Paddy Neale, former New Democratic Party MP, to have the election voided because of irregularities. Final results had given Lee a 57-vote margin.

The judges found that all but one of the five instances of irregular procedure cited by Neale's counsel either were without merit or could not have significantly affected the outcome of the vote.

They did not consider evidence regarding 378 voters alleged to have voted in the advance poll without having sworn the required affidavit, or having sworn defective affidavits.

Neale said his "personal inclination" is to accept the judgment as final. He said he would have to consult with his lawyer but likely will not appeal.

Neale said he has made no final decision on whether he will re-enter politics.

Lee was not available for comment.

25-year stay overruled

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A decision by a Burnaby provincial court judge to adjourn a case for 25 years was overruled Monday.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Kirke Smith ruled against Judge D. D. Hart after the crown appealed the provincial court decision.

Hart, a former juvenile and family court judge, gave the 25-year remand, to December, 1999, to Paul Murray Tayes, 17, of Burnaby, when the youth appeared before him two months ago on a charge of driving with a blood alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

Sean Madigan, district crown prosecutor, said Hart's order erred in law by adjourning the proceedings for more than eight days without the consent of the prosecution.

No immediate leaps in prices as freeze lifted

There were no visible price leaps Monday, the first day after the provincial freeze was lifted.

The freeze, placed on wholesale and retail foodstuffs, prescription drugs, proprietary and patent medicines, energy fuels and certain provincial freight rates, was enacted Oct. 24 by the former New Democratic Party government and later extended.

Rises in the prices of coffee, fish, soup, paper products and heating oil are expected to be among the first but the public will not be hit immediately with the full increases.

Heating oil is expected to rise 4.5 cents to 43.5 cents a gallon.

Some B.C. consumers thought liquor prices were going to be the first to go up and many stocked up on Saturday. But Al Zubick, assistant stock director for the Liquor Administration Branch in Vancouver, said Monday there were no increases authorized at present.

Spokesman Ken Murdoch said the provincial consumer services department will continue to monitor increases in prices but warned that prices will be permitted to go up within the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

A check Monday with the consumer services department in Victoria for a reaction to removal of the freeze brought a laugh from information director Dorothy Atwater, who said the only reaction was "from the media."

The department receives print-outs of wholesale food prices and will use these as a base for monitoring prices in local stores.

Consumers with complaints about price increases are being directed to the Revenue Canada anti-inflation board hotline at 388-2711.

Some items, caught at special or sale prices when the freeze was ordered, are expected to take a sharp rise.

A spokesman for Canada Safeway Ltd. said shoppers will not be hit by immediate, shopping increases.

A spokesman for B.C. Hydro in Vancouver confirmed an earlier announcement that increases are being considered for bus fares, natural gas and electricity rates.

Frank Archer, executive secretary of the Professional Pharmacists Society in Vancouver, said drug prices will definitely increase.

"It will take some time," he said. "The prices go from the company to the wholesaler to the pharmacist, who has started using the stock."

Archer said several unionized stores granted an 8 per cent increase to employees Jan. 1 and will probably have to increase dispensing fees to cover the costs.

The Consumers Association of Canada (B.C.) reported little action Monday on its three telephone lines and president Ada Brown of Vancouver suggested consumers watch prices closely and question store managers about any sharp increases.

Attacks on Teng point to China political fight

HONG KONG — In charges identical to those made against him when he was purged during the cultural revoltion a decade ago, vice premier Teng Hsiao-ping is being accused of putting economic development ahead of politics.

This is only part of the criticism by leftist radicals in a political struggle that appears to be targeted against the 71-year-old Teng who made one of the most remarkable political comebacks in the history of communist China.

A Shanghai radio broadcast Monday said the "current class struggle" was "personally initiated" by Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung.

But this does not necessarily mean that Mao is opposed to Teng. Persistent political struggle is the cornerstone of his political philosophy. It encourages criticism of the top leadership.

The attacks, however, have the earmarks of a major political struggle in view of the death of premier Chou En-Lai last month.

Brush with death started with rock

Still shaking almost 24 hours after a shattering experience Sunday, a Victoria mother of three Monday told a story of a close brush with death in hopes that those responsible will stop short of killing someone.

Darlene Burry, 7 Heyward Heights, said she was driving her car along West Saanich Road toward Royal Oak, heading home with son Glenn, 15, and daughters Patricia, 11, and Sherri, 9, when "I heard a big bang . . . I thought it was a blowout."

A fist-sized rock had been thrown through the second window on the left side, landing in Patricia's lap and showering the girl with glass fragments. She had facial bruises, one finger was cut and she became hysterical.

Mrs. Burry stopped the car and Glenn jumped out to find the rock thrower. She heard sounds of people running through nearby bushes but found no one.

Later, a woman resident in the area told Mrs. Burry she heard boys "laughing as they ran by her house" and police said the problem had occurred before but the culprits had never been found.

Mrs. Burry said she decided before starting the car trip to move Sherri into the front seat with Glenn and herself. Because of that, Patricia moved to the centre of the back seat.

"Otherwise, she would have been right against that window," said the distraught mother. "And if the rock had hit me, I definitely would not be here to tell you the story.

"I'm still so upset I want something done. Maybe somebody might die next time."

Rebates for all—Grit

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said Monday the 25 per cent rebate on 25-year-and-under automobile insurance should be extended to all drivers in B.C.

Gibson, back in the province after a vacation in Hawaii, was commenting on the 25 per cent rebate offered under 25s last Thursday providing they complete a full year of accident-free driving.

Pat McGeer, the cabinet minister in charge of the Insurance Corp. of B.C., has since stated that an accident-free year means a year in which the insurance policy owner was not responsible for an accident. McGeer said that if a driver, for example, was involved in an incident with a hit-and-run-driver such a claim would not be regarded as a claim against his insurance.

That concession, apparently, was not good enough for Gibson.

"If it (the 25 per cent rebate) is sound for one group, it's sound for all," Gibson said. "This would be an immediate, tangible incentive for safe driving."

Gibson said the system of rebates for good driving was not new.

"Insurance companies in other areas have been following this system for years," he said. "Discounts and rebates are offered for one, two, three and more years of claim-free driving, while claim experience is surcharged."

The Liberal leader said insurance costs should be "based on controllable risk rather than uncontrollable cir-

Village's finances 'in good shape'

By JOHN LANGTON
Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM BEACH — This village's finances are in good shape, according to a report presented to council by municipal clerk, Leo Klees.

This year, as in the past, council finished the financial year with a surplus of $52,346. In 1974 it was $25,665.

Revenues last year were $750,560, and in 1974 $531,110.

Mayor Orlane Rye said, "Our finances are being looked after very well."

The village's chief source of revenue is from taxation. Last year it amounted to $175,420. Provincial government grants totalled $123,214.

Motor vehicle licences and insurance can be purchased at the municipal office and the village received $6,085 in commissions.

Qualicum Beach obtained revenue of $39,385 from its own sources. These included professional and business licences, building permits, rentals, interest and tax penalties, and a $5,000 grant from the Rotary Club. The grant was used to help pay for a tennis court.

The village collected taxes for the school district in the amount of $294,615. It also made tax collections of $23,181 for the Nanaimo Region Board and $11,788 for the Nanaimo District Hospital which serves Qualicum Beach.

Expenses were: Administration cost $39,073; road maintenance, building and street lighting cost $70,513; recreation services, which included such items as park and beach maintenance and swimming instruction, cost $33,560. The village also paid $11,176 for fire protection.

Garbage collection cost $20,842, down from the previous year's $21,634 because the village work crew performed the service.

Capital expenditures of $85,548 were made on the purchase of a garbage truck, the addition to the municipal office, radio equipment for the volunteer fire department, paving, and for initial construction of garage facilities for the village's trucks, grader and other equipment.

Water works finances are kept in a separate account. Here, revenue for the year was $85,494, which included a surplus of $10,363 from the previous year. Water sales brought in $44,251 and connection fees $9,435.

Operation of the system cost $30,668, and improvements and additions $34,828.

Assets of $88,539 have been listed in the village's annual report. Municipal clerk Leo Klees said it would cost far more than this to replace the assets. For example, the solid waste disposal site, that is the garbage dump, which covers several acres is worth far more than the dollar the village paid for it, he said. The airport, which covers over 27 acres, was bought for $5,000.

COURTENAY — An overwhelming number of area residents surveyed recently favor limiting growth or retaining the status quo, regional district planning director Thomas Becker has told a public meeting arranged by the Community Planning Action Committee.

Becker, invited to speak on the recently drafted Comox-Strathcona Region Board community development plan, said the survey showed only 12 per cent favor slow or minimal growth.

Twenty per cent of those surveyed want to see the present trend continue while 21 per cent favored encouraging growth.

More than 90 per cent favored the single family dwelling, but a surprising number chose a mobile home as second choice, the planner told the audience of 50.

The plan, he said, reduces uncertainty about future development.

Becker warned, however, that more apartment and condominium dwelling must be considered in future to make maximum use of land.

Demands on services and energy will mean other lifestyles will have to be found, the planner said.

Child abuse more than isolated batterings

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Colonist Reporter

Solving child abuse through the courts is more than straight application of child protection laws.

That's why many court and law school officials believe the next generation of lawyers should be weaned on case study that includes a look behind the scenes at decisions made by social workers, prosecutors, police and court officials.

One recent Victoria family court case in which a two-year-old child was found in need of protection has been incorporated into a textbook at the University of Victoria law school.

It details the drama behind the court stage in a matter as emotion-packed as mother-child relations when society imposes its standards of care.

The child was first found late one night in 1974 by a Saanich detective who found him alone and crying in a crib, with wet diapers and no food but a baby bottle of curdled milk.

Law school professor Lyman Robinson and Dean Murray Fraser edited the book that contains the case history and reports as non-academic as Why Physicians Won't Get Involved in Child Abuse Cases and What to do About it.

To say court decisions hinge on "the stomach standard" is cynical — rarely do judges rely on gut feeling — but discretion weighs heavily in most decisions, he said.

"And many factors go into the exercise of discretion."

They show students the effect of numerous adjournments which are frequent in today's crowded courts and not spoken of in law legislation.

And this case shows the lack of family court time available in the province, Robinson said, because it ultimately dragged on for almost two years.

It hits on an issue which Robinson says the public ignores or is confused about — child abuse — although the Protection of Children Act makes public duty clear.

"The act imposes the obligation on each one of us to report it to the police or superintendent of child welfare if we suspect child abuse," he said.

And 1972 amendments make sure no one can suffer retribution from angry parents who have been reported.

A subsequent coursebook will follow up the case and give some of the testimony such as the following from actual court transcripts:

"I tried to look after my kids. I swear by God I never meant them any harm . . . But before I can be a good mother it is first necessary to be a productive and useful human being.

"Without that there is no hope, not only for myself, but for my children and myself as a unit," said the mother.

"It is not easy to say goodbye, but if by doing that I can work for a situation later . . . and be the kind of mother they should have, I have to try for that.

"In situations this important you don't lie to yourself. You can't lie to the soul."

COURTENAY — Provincial court judge Bowen-Colthurst told a defence counsel Monday that he (the judge) would require more particulars before condemning hotel staff for boosting liquor sales by selling liquor to "an obviously drunken person."

He made the comment during trial of Gary Woods, 19, of Courtenay, who pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by shouting insulting language.

Defence counsel Davis Gibson said his client arrived at the hotel in very intoxicated manner, "yet the hotel staff continued serving him liquor despite his drunken condition."

The hotel staff was responsible for compounding the problem, Gibson argued, as he asked that this be taken into account by the judge when passing sentence.

Gibson said the law is quite clear that intoxicated persons should not be served. He added that when his client vacated the cabaret there was still a large quantity of liquor on his table.

The judge said he would need more particulars concerning the accused's state when he arrived at the cabaret before condemning hotel staff.

Imposing a $200 fine, the judge told Woods he had breached the public peace by swearing at customers, and was possibly responsible for ruining patron's enjoyment.

In other cases, 11 persons appeared on drinking-driving charges, with the average breathalyzer reading of all the accused being almost .20 per cent.

Several of the accused were ordered to take the impaired drivers course. Those not ordered to attend the course had heavier fines imposed.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Bamfield marine station popular

BAMFIELD — Staff on this west coast marine station may feel isolated at times, but seldom lonely. And weekends it can often be quite hectic, with groups of visitors taking advantage of the station's facilities.

One such group was organized recently by the Malaspina College, Nanaimo, and spent a weekend studying marine life under the guidance of Mrs. Miriam Haycock, a biology technician at the station.

The weekend program included walks along the beaches, trips in a trawler and some work in the station's laboratory. The visitors were also shown a collection of marine life kept at the station.

A highlight of the weekend was the trip on a commercial fishing boat. The 53-foot Leik was outfitted by the station to dredge for marine life.

The students, researchers and other visitors are accommodated in houses at the station. Meals are served cafeteria-style in the dining room located in one building along with a recreation room and lecture area. The whole wall of the building facing the sea is made of glass, with views of the Bamfield Inlet and the sea.

During the summer months the station is in full use with research projects, undergraduate programs and special courses. During the winter months it is used by graduate students and, increasingly by classes from universities, community colleges and high schools.

The station is operated by the Western Canadian Universities Marine Biological Society. The organization is made up of the universities of Victoria, British Columbia, Simon Fraser, Calgary and Alberta.

Christmas Seal donations drop

Campaign chairman Mrs. Jenny Dodds said the local decline reflects a provincial trend, which saw donations drop from $475,000 to $125,000.

Mrs. Dodds blamed the long mail strike for the decline, but said strikes last fall also played a part.

CAMPBELL RIVER — Louis Glendale, 34, of Campbell River has been sentenced to nine months in Vancouver Island Regional Correctional Centre for assault causing bodily harm in the stabbing of a Prince Rupert man Oct. 8 last year.

The sentence will run concurrent with a seven month sentence he received in Courtenay for shoplifting.

Judge Anthony Sarich imposed a two-year probation period and told the accused he was to abstain from liquor during the probation term.

Courtenay RCMP said Monday that Donald will appear in court here today to face additional charges.

A police spokesman said a Courtenay resident reported a masked, shot-gun wielding man entered his home Saturday morning.

Police also are investigating theft of a fur coat owned by Theresa McCooey, Royston, from the Mexicana Motor Inn, and theft of tools valued at $400 from a truck owned by Arthur Belt of Cumberland.

DUNCAN — More retired people are required for daytime courses being arranged by the Cowichan Valley Seniors' Activities Committee.

Prbgram co-ordinator Mrs. Gudrun Hancock said the free courses, which are aimed at the needs of the retired in conjunction with Malaspina College, Nanaimo, "Are not running at full capacity."

The free courses range from golden-age exercise to pocket gardening, and have been held since mid-January in various locations in the Cowichan Valley.

The next course, in defensive driving, will start, Feb. 19 in Youbou and Duncan. There will also be a panel discussion on wills and estates in Chemainus Feb. 23, in Youbou Feb. 24 and in Duncan Feb. 25.

Those interested in the program should contact the Malaspina College office in Duncan for more information.

PARKSVILLE — Don Snook has been elected president of Parksville Fish and Game Association to succeed Vic Williams. Other officers elected at the recent annual meeting were Mike Wolfe, first vice-president, Horace Gould, second vice-president, Bill Walker, recording secretary, Henry Estlin, corresponding secretary, Jim Kingsley, treasurer.

Dental records probed of man killed in fire

DUNCAN — Dental records are going to be checked to give a positive identification of a man who died in a house fire on Tzouhalem Road here Saturday night.

A Duncan RCMP spokesman said police suspect the man was Vincent Canute, 31, who resided in the house on the Cowichan Indian Reserve, but they are awaiting confirmation from Victoria where the remains were taken.

Canute was last seen early Saturday night heading for his home before the fire was reported at 8:45 p.m.

Duncan coroner T. H. Lines said an inquiry will be held.

Qualicum Beach

Residents' group protesting cost of sewer project

QUALICUM BEACH — A residents association here claims the sewage collecting system to be installed here soon, will put a $5,000 debt on each of the village's 800 homes.

The group also said that more debts will be added to cover the construction of a treatment plant at French Creek.

The village was ordered last year by the Pollution Control Board to install the system.

Donald McMillan, president of the Qualicum Beach Residents Association, said in a letter to the village council that the sewage collecting system "is a huge and terribly expensive undertaking for a village of 1,600 people, and an enormous debt for 800 houses assisted by a few commercial businesses."

He said, "It seems quite clear there is no way of knowing what this huge undertaking, precipitated by some previous council, is going to cost, and do members of the present council understand their responsibility in this connection?"

Engineers estimate cost of the system will be between $3.4 million and $3.7 million, but McMillan said there is usually a 10 to 20 per cent overrun on contract prices, so the cost will therefore be "between $3,940,000 and $4,440,000." In his five page letter to the village council, McMillan asked whether contract prices would be firm or if there would be a cost-plus clause.

McMillan said the cost will be further increased by inflation.

He also asked council where it will get the money. He wants to know if a $240,000 provincial government grant will definitely be obtained, and pointed out that the grant would represent a very small percentage of the total cost.

McMilan also had reservations about the $2.5 million the Nanaimo Region Board is to borrow on behalf of Qualicum Beach. He said the interest rate will probably be 12 to 13 per cent at least, and he said he doubted if the money can be borrowed for more than five years. "After that a new loan would have to be negotiated at higher interest rates."

In his letter, McMillan said beach pollution could be cleaned up without the big debt of the sewer system. He suggested the use of holding tanks similar to those used at the George Inn. Residents could be restrained from discharging detergent into septic tanks which destroys the bacterial action, he said.

The French Creek treatment plant and trunk sewers connecting it with Qualicum Beach will be paid for in part by property owners in this village.

McMillan said that a year ago it was estimated the cost of the first phase of construction would be $3.5 million and annual operating costs would be $74,000. He said 10 to 15 per cent should be added to these figures for inflation.

In the second phase it will require $2.5 million in capital costs with estimated annual operating costs of $115,000.

Council was also asked by McMillan what assurances it had that the Qualicum Beach collection system will be completed at about the same time as the treatment plant. "If it is completed well ahead of the plant, it could cause considerable financial difficulties for the village."

McMillan said the village has already obtained bids for sewer pipe and will soon be opening tenders for installation. The Nanaimo Region Board has only just received a permit from the Pollution Control Board for the construction of the treatment plant.

At its February meeting, the Qualicum Beach Residents Association members unanimously supported McMillan's letter to the village council.

Police question five juveniles

NANAIMO — Several days of intense investigation by RCMP Consst. Robert Appleby has resulted in solution to an outbreak of vandalism in the city.

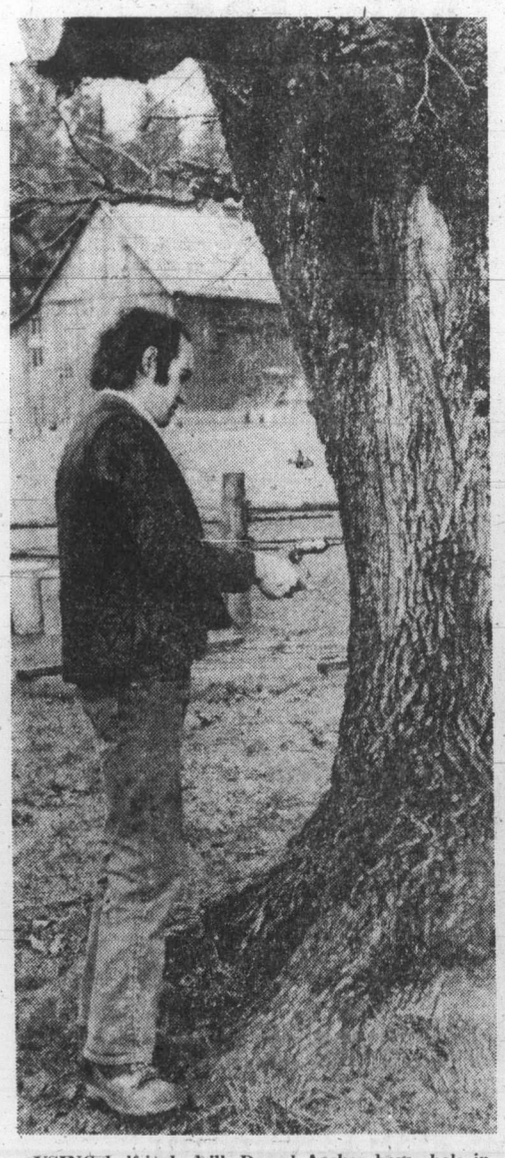

Appleby reported Monday that over the course of the past two weeks, six houses have been broken into and articles stolen and, in some cases the house has been vandalised.

Damage in the house which is for sale was estimated at least $2,000. It had paint spilled on the basement floor then tracked upstairs onto new carpeting and flooring, windows and a door frame were broken, scratches were made in the new plaster walls and the vandals created other damage to both the building and a portable toilet owned by the contracting firm.

Appleby said that five juveniles, ranging in age from 14 to 16 are believed to be responsible for the acts, and now are being dealt with by juvenile authorities.

There was no estimate of total damage to all six houses available Monday.

Cowichan maples disprove West-trees-inferior theory

ARCHER prepares 30-gallon cooking kettle for boiling sap. One tree produced 30 gallons of sap in single day.

By CRAIG MEREDITH
Colonist Correspondent

Disproving a myth prevalent in B.C. for a number of years, a Duncan man has taken up the centuries-old eastern Canadian tradition of tapping maple trees for their sweet sap.

Twenty-seven-year-old Darrel Archer, who operates the Kelvin Creek Ranch at Cowichan Station with his parents, could not see why local maples could not produce sap with a high enough sugar content to make syrup.

"It has been widely accepted that the winters on Vancouver Island are not cold enough to start a good sap run, and also that the broadleaf maples indigenous to the West Coast are not the right kind," Archer said.

After reading everything he could get on the subject, Archer said he has been highly successful since he first began tapping nine trees on his property last February.

Cold nights and warm days are a necessary ingredient to start the sap running from a tree. With ideal conditions, one of Archer's maple trees produced 30 gallons in one day last year.

Suggesting one tap in the tree for every foot of trunk diameter, Archer said, "There is not much danger of overtapping a tree because it will automatically stop producing sap if too much is taken."

With a converted 45-gallon oil drum as a firebox, he boils the collected sap continuously in a 30-gallon cooking kettle until it is 65-per-cent maple sugar.

Last February, Archer boiled down more than 120 gallons, which rendered down to four gallons of tasty maple syrup.

When the sap is collected, which is best locally from January to March, Archer warns that it must be cooked into syrup immediately or else frozen because it spoils if left for any time.

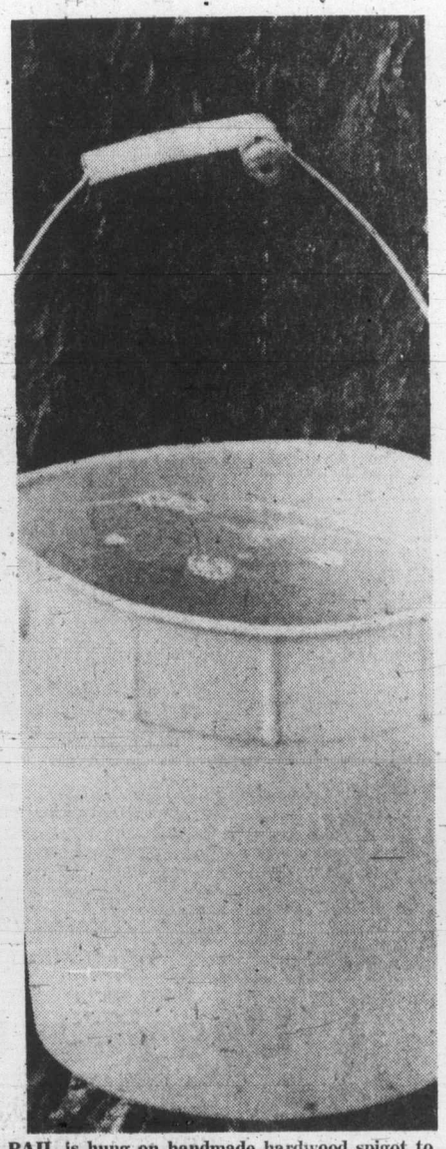

He added that the freshly-boiled mixture should be allowed to settle so the "sugar sand" can sink to the bottom of the mixture.

Sugar sand is a fine grain sand which comes up with sap from the tree's roots and supplies minerals to the upper reaches of the tree.

"Anybody who is willing to put in the time necessary," Archer said, "is in for a tasty addition to their meals, which can't be surpassed by the commercial products."

Hard Indian fact: Water is costly

BOMBAY (CP) — The Indian administration appears to be getting tough with peasants who expect more government aid without making any contributions themselves.

Recently, peasants in a dozen hamlets in the Krishna County of Andhra state discovered that the water pipes in their backyards had gone dry.

More than 50,000 peasants in the area now are without purified drinking water and have to depend on rain-fed wells.

Some politicians say the drastic action was taken when the panshayats (village councils) failed to make contributions toward maintenance charges.

A few of the councils say they have no money, while others say that the contribution demanded is "impossibly high."

Andhra state officials say there is no other way to bring the erring village councils to their senses.

One official said: "Do these people take welfare measures for granted? Nothing comes free and if the peasants want safe drinking water, more schools or roads, they must be prepared to pay at least a part of the expenditure to the government."

A ruling Congress Party politician defended the government's action by saying that "socialism does not mean the mere distribution of benefits without a corresponding growth of public responsibility."

The big and the small of B.C.

This man directs aural history

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

If you've got something to say about British Columbia, Bill Langlois wants to hear it.

Don't worry, he's a good listener. He has to be as director of aural history at the Provincial Archives.

Aural—not to be confused with oral—is that which is heard according to Langlois. And much of what is relevant to B.C. life today, Langlois said, is heard before it is read.

"Most decisions there are made orally and then backed up with a memo," he said.

And chances are if someone was around with a tape recorder at the time, then the words of those decisions are among the 8,000 hours of listening stored in the basement of the archives.

While Langlois and his staff of five could easily hunt up a tape of Dave Barrett's Winfield speech from his 1974 fall tour or the recollections of CCF'er Harold Winch or the Hansard tapes from the spring sitting, he said only about 10 per cent of their material is related to B.C. politics.

The bulk of the tapes deals with the social and economic life of the province from between the wars to today. The provincial collection started in 1973 has some tapes covering the late 19th century but Langlois finds that people with vivid recollections of this era are being silenced with time.

"As long as people are alive, well and interviewable" is all that's needed before Langlois dispatches a staffer with a tape recorder. But first he likes to know just what it is people have to tell, so he likes a short outline first.

"We can't interview everyone in the province," he said.

And it isn't just the first-hand accounts of the so-called greats of the province that Langlois wants. The recollections of a lumberman for the department's on-going primary industries collection is just as important as that of the forest owners.

In many cases for Langlois, they are more fascinating.

"It's interesting to see how the common man has struggled to make a living, given his kids an education, and the influences of government decisions such as wars or depressions have had on him."

It isn't just people that make it into the collection but environmental noises from the sounds of a lumber camp to a ferry through Active Pass.

Langlois won't pay for tapes. On an approximate $140,000-a-year-budget, he can't. But outfits like the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. or private radio stations have been good about allowing their documentaries, interviews and news clips to be transposed onto the special tape.

Sometimes Langlois can trade existing sound information for other tapes held by university or offer expertise on an aural project in return for a finished tape prepared by a corporation or historical society. It was under similar circumstances that his department collaborated with B.C. Forest Products in its publication of First Growth.

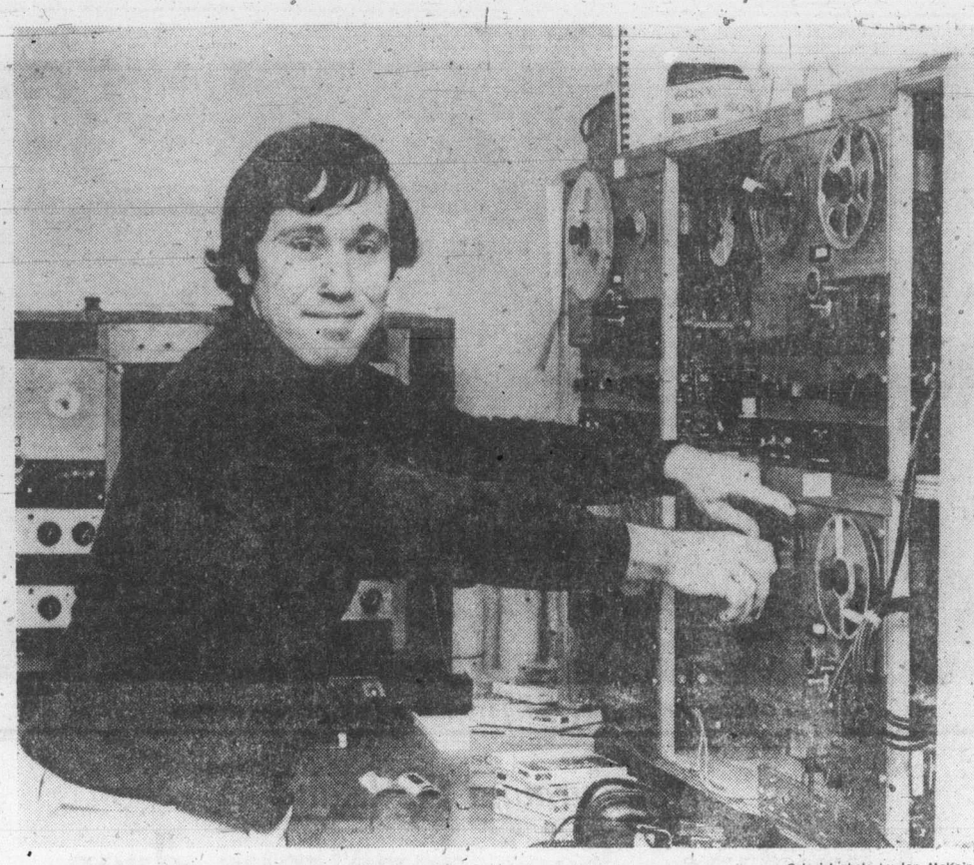

Langlois had his staff poised with tape recorders for last Friday's ICBC demonstration but when the crowd seemed less than expected, he decided to pick it up from radio stations.

Questioning the need for all this taped information brings a look of incredulity to the face of 27-year-old Langlois who started the department on an L.I.P. grant while a disenchanted graduate student at the University of British Columbia four years ago.

"You are preserving parts of the history of the province that are preserved in no other way," he insists.

But as to why this is necessary, he replied:

"We need to know what life was like in the past to understand our present situation."

'Wouldn't be caught dead in the YWCA'

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — When Isabel Russell was an undergraduate student at University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon she "wouldn't be caught dead in the YWCA."

She soon retires as executive director of the Kitchener YWCA, ending a 37-year association with that organization.

"It was the last organization I ever dreamed of being a part of in my undergraduate years," she said in an interview. "I had an image of the YWCA as being so good and saintly that I would be a fish out of water."

Born in Rocanville, Sask., she describes the area as "a community where people had carried over the traditions of Ontario—the large square homes, the calling cards, community involvement."

She said: "Community involvement was part of our experience as children. Ours was a home where people came to discuss problems. The house was always filled with people. There was a great deal of intellectual activity."

"For those of us who experienced the Depression in Saskatchewan there was an urgency for social action," she said. "We had such a sense of need to change the world."

Youth discussion groups flourished, leading to "almost a whole self-help movement in spite of the adversity. It enhanced the utilization of resources and people."

After graduating in 1930 with a science degree, Miss Russell taught for six years "in country schools under very primitive conditions."

Hydro lops plans, 300 jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro has cut almost $100 million from its planned capital expenditures for next year, and has laid off 300 temporary employees, chairman Robert Bonner said Monday, in a letter to employees and in an interview.

Bonner said the company was faced with a loss of $35 million and was attempting to fight mounting costs and financial losses with the move. He also said consideration of increased rates for electric, gas and transit service will begin soon.

He said the $35-million deficit was expected by the end of the current fiscal year ending March 31, and "if costs are not brought under control, and if revenues are not increased, we are facing a doubled deficit by the end of the next fiscal year at March 31, 1977."

The letter to Hydro employees said: "Our first priority, therefore, must be to reduce operating and capital costs substantially without reducing the reliability and quality of service to our customers. To do so, we are examining all capital projects in detail to determine the feasibility of deferring projects and, at the same time, we are studying all opportunities to reduce operating costs by modifying or cancelling functions which are discretionary."

Bonner said cost control was the first problem to be solved because "there is a limit . . . to what the public should be asked to bear" in restoring Hydro's financial health.

He said it is possible the company will lose money on its gas and electrical operations. Previously, it had been expected that the loss would result only from the expanded transit services in Vancouver and Victoria.

The Hydro chairman said the cutback in capital expenditures will not endanger the construction of generating capacity or service to customers, but would delay the start of some projects or increase the term of some construction.

Pittance, pain p.. e of navy injury

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

A 38-year-old Victoria man who was injured twice while in the navy and subsequently discharged on medical grounds, has been fighting a losing battle with military bureaucracy for five years in his efforts to get a disability pension.

Dennis Turgeon of 561 Mount View Avenue says he gave 17 years of his life to the Royal Canadian Navy and in return was kicked out because he was no longer of use to the military.

Although he will never be able to hold a job as a result of two head injuries he received while in the navy, the veterans affairs department pays him only $20 a month, based on a 5-per-cent disability assessment.

At 38, Turgeon can never work again; he can never have sexual intercourse again.

"I ruined my life in the navy. I'm finished and all they want to give me is $20 a month," he said in an interview.

Turgeon has great difficulty talking. His statements come slowly and falteringly.

He takes more than 2,000 painkilling pills a year to control the pains which are the result of his two head injuries.

Turgeon's story sounds like a bureaucratic nightmare.

Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon says the DVA's position on the case is a "mass of contradictions."

Turgeon's story begins May 28, 1965, when he was a leading seaman.

During a drill aboard the destroyer-escort HMCS Qu'Appelle in Esquimalt Har-

Reporters nabbed in Lagos

LONDON (Reuter) — The Reuter news agency office in Lagos was closed Monday by police who took the three Reuter correspondents in Nigeria away for questioning.

A message received before the Reuter circuit to London was disconnected, said chief correspondent Colin Fox, who is British, and his Nigerian assistants, Godwin Ironkwe and Gabriel Ogunsekan, had been taken away in a police car.

No reason has been given for the action against the Reuter staff, who reported Friday's abortive coup attempt in Nigeria.

Lockheed Orions

Plane deal delayed by scandal

OTTAWA (CP) — The Lockheed scandal apparently has delayed indefinitely the signing of a $950 million military contract under which Canada would buy 18 Lockheed Orions as long-range patrol aircraft.

Defence Minister James Richardson, after a 90-minute meeting Monday with Lockheed chairman Robert Haack, said collapse of negotiations is possible unless Lockheed is able to overcome serious problems resulting from the scandal.

Richardson called the meeting after Daniel Stoughton resigned last Friday as Lockheed chairman. He had testified before a U.S. congressional committee that Lockheed had bribed foreign officials to gain contracts. The testimony appears to have scuttled a $1.2 billion Lockheed sale to Japan.

Richardson told a news conference after the meeting he had been assured by Haack a new financing arrangement could be expected later this year.

"The difficulty has not been resolved," he said as both men refused to speculate on when the contract might be signed.

Haack said the effect of the Japanese order on Lockheed and on the Canadian sale has been exaggerated.

About $200 million worth of subcontracts to Canadair Ltd., Montreal, to build Orion parts would not be affected by a Japanese decision not to sign a contract, he said.

W. R. Wilson, Lockheed's senior vice president, said the impact of the Japanese sale on Lockheed has been "vastly overstated." Canadian officials later agreed, saying the Japanese contract called for aircraft to be built in Japan.

Also with Haack were Roy Anderson, Lockheed's new vice-chairman and chief financial officer, and Fred Leary, executive vice-president of the Bankers Trust of New York, a consortium of 24 banks.

Plea bargaining attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada says attorneys-general and judges should act to stop plea bargaining, which the commission defines as any agreement by the accused to plead guilty in return for some benefit.

The commission, in a working paper on control of the process of criminal procedure, says plea bargaining could be ended at once if attorneys-general directed prosecutors to discontinue the practice. It recommended this.

Plea bargaining explains why, for instance, many murder charges end as manslaughter convictions. The charge of murder is placed to scare the accused into pleading guilty to manslaughter, saving time and money.

The prosecution, to induce a guilty plea, also can offer to reduce the number of charges, proceed by summary rather than the more serious indictment procedure, and recommend a light sentence.

The commission condemns this.

Plea bargaining takes place in private. This means that the judge and the public never really hear the case.

"A dangerous criminal should not be let off with a minor conviction and penalty just because he is willing to plead guilty, and thus save the state the time and expense of a trial," the commission said. "Nor does society benefit from a negotiated plea of guilty by a petty offender who should not have been prosecuted."

It also recommended changes that would make attorneys-general more politically accountable for the administration of justice. Among them:

- Attorneys-general should issue directives to prosecutors establishing policy on discretion in placing charges. The policy guides should be made public.
- Consent of the attorney-general to prosecute charges should be required to ensure uniformity of law enforcement across Canada. "As applied to the offence of public

Art Lee retains Vancouver seat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two B.C. Supreme Court judges Monday upheld the 1974 federal election of Liberal MP Art Lee in Vancouver East.

Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz and Justice Davie Fulton dismissed a petition from Paddy Neale, former New Democratic Party MP, to have the election voided because of irregularities. Final results had given Lee a 57-vote margin.

The judges found that all but one of the five instances of irregular procedure cited by Neale's counsel either were without merit or could not have significantly affected the outcome of the vote.

They did not consider evidence regarding 378 voters alleged to have voted in the advance poll without having sworn the required affidavit, or having sworn defective affidavits.

Neale said his "personal inclination" is to accept the judgment as final. He said he would have to consult with his lawyer but likely will not appeal.

Neale said he has made no final decision on whether he will re-enter politics.

Lee was not available for comment.

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Taylor, a long-time Air Canada official, has been named president and chief executive officer of the publicly-owned airline, Transport Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

He will replace Ralph Vaughan who has resigned to become a senior Air Canada vice-president and policy adviser And, as chief executive officer, Taylor takes over from Yves Pratte who resigned in bitterness as airline chairman in November.

The appointment was announced after an Air Canada board of directors meeting attended by Lang here.

Taylor, 50, has been Air Canada vice-president of public affairs since October, 1973.

The transport minister did not appoint a new chairman although it is understood the job was offered to prominent Montreal businessman Pierre Des Marais who turned it down. With the chief executive officer's duties transferred to the president, the chairman's job has lost much of its power.

Taylor
. . . 'challenge'

Des Marais is an Air Canada director and a leading municipal political leader in the Montreal area.

Pierre Taschereau, Canadian National Railways chairman, has been acting chairman since Pratte's resignation.

Taylor said he will aim at making a profit this year after a 1975 Air Canada deficit of $12.5 million. The deficit in 1974 was $9.2 million.

"We have been through very difficult periods in the last few months," he said.

"My challenge is to try and

25-year stay overruled

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A decision by a Burnaby provincial court judge to adjourn a case for 25 years was overruled Monday.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Kirke Smith ruled against Judge D. D. Hart after the crown appealed the provincial court decision.

Hart, a former juvenile and family court judge, gave the 25-year remand, to December, 1999, to Paul Murray Tayes, 17, of Burnaby, when the youth appeared before him two months ago on a charge of driving with a blood alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

Sean Madigan, district crown prosecufor, said Hart's order erred in law by adjourning the proceedings for more than eight days without the consent of the prosecution.

No immediate leaps in prices as freeze lifted

There were no visible price leaps Monday, the first day after the provincial freeze was lifted.

The freeze, placed on wholesale and retail foodstuffs, prescription drugs, proprietary and patent medicines, energy fuels and certain provincial freight rates, was enacted Oct. 24 by the former New Democratic Party government and later extended.

Rises in the prices of coffee, fish, soup, paper products and heating oil are expected to be among the first but the public will not be hit immediately with the full increases.

Heating oil is expected to rise 4.5 cents to 43.5 cents a gallon.

Some B.C. consumers thought liquor prices were going to be the first to go up and many stocked up on Saturday. But Al Zuhick, assistant stock director for the Liquor Administration Branch in Vancouver, said Monday there were no increases authorized at present.

Spokesman Ken Murdoch said the provincial consumer services department will continue to monitor increases in prices but warned that prices will be permitted to go up within the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

A check Monday with the consumer services department in Victoria for a reaction to removal of the freeze brought a laugh from information director Dorothy Atwater, who said the only reaction was "from the media."

The department receives print-outs of wholesale food prices and will use these as a base for monitoring prices in local stores.

Consumers with complaints about price increases are being directed to the Revenue Canada anti-inflation board hotline at 388-2711.

Some items, caught at special or sale prices when the freeze was ordered, are expected to take a sharp rise.

A spokesman for Canada Safeway Ltd. said shoppers will not be hit by immediate shopping increases.

A spokesman for B.C. Hydro in Vancouver confirmed an earlier announcement that increases are being considered for bus fares, natural gas and electricity rates.

Frank Archer, executive secretary of the Professional Pharmacists Society in Vancouver, said drug prices will definitely increase.

"It will take some time," he said. "The prices go from the company to the wholesaler to the pharmacist, who has started using the stock."

Archer said several unionized stores granted an 8 per cent increase to employees Jan. 1 and will probably have to increase dispensing fees to cover the costs.

The Consumers Association of Canada (B.C.) reported little action Monday on its three telephone lines and president Ada Brown of Vancouver suggested consumers watch prices closely and question store managers about any sharp increases.

'Mutt and Jeff' in daylight robbery

Two masked men made off with more than $300 from a James Bay pharmacy Monday but not without a short chase from a clerk they had threatened with a concealed weapon.

The two, described by police as a "Mutt and Jeff" team and believed to be about 20, entered the James Bay United Pharmacy, 230 Menzies, just before closing time at 5:45 p.m.

According to owner Gerry Lundgren, clerk Ruth Ridley was surprised at the counter by the two men who were wearing caps and silk stockings over their faces.

She was then threatened by what police described as a simulated weapon in the sleeve of one of the men.

As Ms. Hicks was emptying the till of the day's receipts, assistant pharmacist Colleen Hicks entered the store from a back room and immediately started to phone police when she saw the robbery in progress.

The two then fled on foot with the cash and Ms. Hicks pursued but soon lost them. She noticed that one of the two lost his cap and stopped to retrieve it.

Lundgren, who was in a back room at the time of the robbery, said the two probably had waited outside until all the customers had left the store.

He said it was the first daylight robbery in his six years of operating the store.

NO SUN BUT FUN

Victoria youngsters had all the symptoms of spring fever Monday, despite brisk winds, grey skies and, officially, at least five more weeks of winter. At Rochdale Place, stilts are suddenly the rage; high-rise walkers are Jay Hooper, Garth Henault and Cory Hooper. At Dallas Road seafront, meanwhile, 2½-year-old Dyllan McLean expended so much energy riding his toy duck that father Vince, of 156 Joseph, had to carry both of them home.

Saanich orders teeth for 'Jaws'

Jaws of Life will be coming to Saanich.

It's not a film sequel. These jaws are actually car-clipping equipment which Saanich firemen have been borrowing from Victoria firemen to free accident victims from auto wreckage.

The equipment has been used in Saanich five times since the city purchased it in mid-1975, fire chief H. B. Gains reported to council Monday.

"While the loan of this equipment and manpower from Victoria is much appreciated, there is a certain time delay which could well cost a life," he said, and he suggested Saanich purchase its own equipment.

Ald. Fred Severson, himself a city fireman, said the Victoria fire department has offered to train Saanich firemen to operate the equipment. He added that Saanich should purchase its own tips for the metal-cutters immediately, to save wear and tear on the city's equipment.

Council approved the purchase, with Saanich's unit of the Provincial Emergency Program taking up half of the $8,000 purchase price.

No if or butt, smokes out for aldermen

The latest victim is the Saanich council chamber—or more specifically, Mayor Ed Lum and aldermen William Noel, Fred Severson, and Joe Bourque.

A resolution to ban smoking in the council chamber was narrowly passed at Monday's council meeting.

An attempt to ban smoking was turned back last year, but the election of non-smokers David Paterson and Maurice Johnson gave the crusade just the boost it needed.

The two newcomers added their votes to those of Mary Casilio, Roy Wootten and John McDonald.

Immediately after Wootten introduced the resolution, Noel began to complain that, if smoking was banned in the chamber, the ban should logically be extended to the entire building (a frightful prospect for Noel, who already has to cope with a ban at home).

As Noel talked, Ald. Fred Severson lit up a large cigar and gleefully puffed away until his head was all but lost in billows of smoke.

Then Bourque joined in, claiming he had never heard any complaints about smoking in the chamber and to create regulations where no problem existed would be clearly discriminatory.

Meanwhile, McDonald, who sits between Bourque and Severson, was leaning back in his chair to escape the fumes of Severson's cigar.

He claimed he had as much right to not inhale second-hand smoke from Severson's cigar as Severson had to smoke.

Lum, who had been looking a bit nervous, relaxed when he lit up his own cigarette.

A tabling motion by the smokers was defeated.

Severson made a final plea, asking that visitors in the chamber's gallery be permitted to enjoy their smokes.

Then the resolution passed, five to four.

Severson wanted a few more puffs on his miniature chimney, but municipal clerk (and fellow cigar-puffer) Gordon Hayward confirmed that the resolution did not require second, third, and final readings to take effect.

$4-million claim for lost holiday

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Heritage Day just won't go away.

Which may seem rather odd, since it was never really here.

But, with the B.C. Government Employees' Union, it's the thought that counts. And the union wants to hang a $4-million bill on the province for a special day that was — at best — stillborn.

The catch is Article 1701 in the BCGEU's collective agreement with the government, which says: "Heritage Day shall be recognized as a designated paid holiday upon proclamation."

And it was proclaimed. When the federal government didn't do it, as expected, the new provincial cabinet did on Jan. 20. But then, in a change of mind, it rescinded the order, and Monday—which was to have been Heritage Day in B.C.—was a day just like any other day.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy says Heritage Day was never proclaimed as a statutory holiday, but simply as a day of honor.

But the union is pointing to the clause and saying that once proclaimed, it falls into the holiday category and should mean double-time payment for all government employees working Monday.

The union has filed a policy grievance with the public service commission, something that is expected to put legal minds to the test. If the matter isn't solved at this level, the next step is expected to be binding arbitration.

The case is proving interesting to the labor movement as a whole, even though other unions don't stand to gain anything.

"The BCGEU is very fortunate in the special wording of its contract," a spokesman for the B.C. Federation of Labor said Monday. "It is probably the only union with the actual words Heritage Day in its contract, and it would seem to have a legitimate claim."

Fryer
. . . monumental goof

It's the kind of claim the BCGEU says could cost the government $4 million in double time payment.

The irony of the case, according to union officers, is that the actual cost would have been only a small fraction of this amount if the government had allowed the day to stand as a proclaimed holiday.

The vast majority of the union's 35,000 members would have had the day off with no extra pay.

John Fryer, general secretary of the union, looks on the cabinet's action as a monumental goof.

"After realizing at the last minute that the proclamation entitled BCGEU members to the holiday, the government is trying to wriggle out of this obligation by playing sleight-of-hand tricks with orders-in-council," Fryer said.

He said later there had been an insinuation that he was acting in an irresponsible manner.

"It seems to me it is a legitimate labor relations problem of the government's making — not of the union's," he said. "The proper way to deal with such a matter is through grievance, which is what we are doing."

Fryer says it is interesting to note that the government is the only employer with the power "to give a holiday, then take it away."

Whatever the end result, those who miss Heritage Day can take heart that this is now Heritage Week in B.C. In rescinding its original order, cabinet designated the week as such — only not as a holiday.

Henderson parking cut

A Henderson Road partial parking ban suggested last week as an interim solution to the problem of whether the street should have a bikeway was approved by Oak Bay council Monday.

The street from Lansdowne to Cedar Hill Cross Road will be closed to parking for northbound cars from 8 to 10 a.m. and for southbound vehicles from 3 to 5 p.m.

Some Henderson Road residents are angry over their street being slated as part of th Capital Region bikeway, and though Victoria and Saanich have approved their sections of the path, Oak Bays is still in limbo.

Saanich wants tougher rules for juveniles

Juvenile lawbreakers and their parents should be hit with stiffer penalties, according to Saanich council.

An increase in crime among juveniles was the most disturbing part of Saanich's climbing crime rate, Mayor Ed Lum said Monday during council's discussion of the 1976 police budget.

Saanich was starting community programs to prevent juvenile crime, Lum said. Meanwhile, laws concerning juveniles made it "very frustrating" to deal with juveniles in the courts, he said.

Penalties should be stiffer and parents should be made responsible for their children's offences, he said. Ald. William Noel agreed, adding that parents should be made to pay for property damage.

B.C. police chiefs have already urged the attorney-general to strengthen laws dealing with juveniles, and council could do the same, Lum said. Council passed a motion to that effect.

Lum also criticized provincial court procedures which added unnecessarily to police overtime. As many as six officers at a time could be tied up in court, he said. He complained of many cases in which officers had waited hours, only to hear a case remanded.

Because provincial court needed "tightening up," the hiring of additional police officers would not cut overtime costs in Saanich's police budget, he said.

The switch to a 12-hour shift for police had helped the overtime situation a little, Lum said. He added that much more work seemed to be getting done since the 12-hour shifts started.

"Much to my astonishment," he said. He hadn't expected the new schedule to work well.

Council tabled the police budget so it could be discussed with the police board later this month. It calls for an increase of $61 8,500 or just over 25 per cent more than the 1975 budget.

Oak Bay keeps liquor lounge

"You can't run a facility that pleases all the people all the time," Mayor Brian Smith said.

"And where have the objectors been?" he asked, saying the bar in the centre near Fort and Foul Bay had been open for four months.

Council received two letters from Victoria and Oak Bay United churches expressing disapproval of the sports complex bar, and one petition with 34 names of residents also opposed.

Cadboro Bay United Church minister, Rev. Robert McLaren feared the bar tended to break up families at the centre because children were denied entry to the upper-level lounge.

"I want you to have a facility here that doesn't divide fathers and mothers and sons and daughters," he said.

One young father said he wasn't allowed to take his 20-month-old son into the lounge recently.

"Why should I go there and have to be separated from my family?" he asked.

A suggestion from Ald. John Goult that the provincial government be petitioned to amend liquor laws to allow children into the lounge with their parents was rejected.

Both Esquimalt and Juan de Fuca recreation centres near Victoria served liquor seven days a week, Smith said.

Representatives of women's and men's curling groups made submissions supporting retention of the bar.

One resident responded to McLaren's comments about family breakdown through divisive activities such as drinking.

"It's not the church's fault family structures are falling down. That's a bigger problem than this council is expected to fix," Anne Buie, 1082 Richmond, said.

Liquor is served at the centre from 6 to 10 p.m. Mondays to Fridays.

Compromise on cost-sharing may preserve library system

By LORRAINE ATHERTON
Colonist Reporter

Saanich made what Mayor Ed Lum called "a major compromise" Monday to save the Greater Victoria library system.

Council agreed to go along with the library board's latest cost-sharing formula to end the Saanich-Victoria tug-of-war over library regionalization.

The library board has been trying to win an increased provincial grant from the Library Development Commission, but Victoria endangered the grant by refusing to accept a new cost-sharing formula suggested by the commission. That formula was based on school assessment.

The latest formula sets a base payment for each municipality. Then the provincial grant is added to the budget and the surplus is divided among the municipalities through a formula based on general assessment and population.

The increased grant could save Saanich alone $100,000. But under the plan vetoed by the city, Saanich could have saved $140,000 while the city paid only a few hundred dollars more, Lum said.

The city's fears about the long-term costs under the school assessment formula were not well-founded, he said, because in the long-term, under either formula, Saanich would pay the major share of the library budget.

But to prevent the break-up of the library board, the city had to be satisfied, Lum told his council.

The formula must still be approved by the other participating municipalities, and it must be accepted by the commission.

In other business, council voted to declare the southeast corner of McKenzie and Saanich roads a development area. Anolac Investments will attempt to negotiate a land-use contract for 10 units of attached housing on the site.

Autoplan agents braced for two-week rush

Body-shop jam unnecessary

It's not exactly a two-ring circus, but business is picking up on two fronts as the Feb. 29 deadline draws near for B.C. motorists.

Motorists trying to get under the wire ahead of higher repair rates have created a minor rush on Victoria's Insurance Corp. of B.C. claims centre, as well as body shops.

They are also beginning to form small lineups for 1976 Autoplan insurance policies and licences.

Monday, with 13 days to go, it was difficult to say what effect the controversial doubling and tripling of Autoplan premiums would have on the non-compulsory aspects of insurance coverage.

Business was reported as "brisk" and "normal" for this time of year by some insurance agents and a spokesman for the motor vehicle branch.

But with the big rush yet to come, plans have been made to keep motor vehicle branch and government agent offices open on the last two Saturdays of the month.

Branch offices in Victoria, the Lower Mainland, Kamloops and Trail will be open Feb. 21 and 28 from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. In smaller communities, government agents' offices will be open on the same days from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Private insurance offices handling the government-run Autoplan will be open on the same two Saturdays.

This year will also bring new licence plates for commercial vehicles and commercial trailers — a change after three years of decals. The decal system remains for all other vehicles and private trailers.

A spokesman for the Motor Vehicle Branch said the new issue of commercial plates was made necessary when "we ran out of number sequences."

The run on the claims office and body shops has been prompted by the extra money it is going to cost policyholders for collision repairs after Feb. 29.

Under current terms, motorists have to pay a minimum of $50 toward collision repairs and $25 on a new windshield. The new policies will double these minimums.

An ICBC spokesman said many motorists mistakenly believe their cars have to be repaired before the end of February to qualify for the lower deductible rate. The repairs can be completed afterward as long as the accident occurred before the deadline, he said.
